1850's Cont'd

The four Barber brothers were woolen manufacturers, iron founders, machinists and sawmill proprietors. The woollen mill and foundry were located on Park Street, which was then known as Factory and Water Street. The power for the mills was obtained by damming the creek. The Foundry supplied all the cast and iron work (except bridges) for the Grand Trunk Line which was built through Georgetown between 1852 and 1856. However, in 1852, the woollen mill closed and the equipment was moved to Streetsville.

Around this time the Barbers built a paper factory for David Forbes on the Credit River, (where Blackbox Radio Remote Control and Carole Black Studios are presently located) and eventually the Barbers took over this factory too. William, Joseph and James Street are named after three of the four Barber brothers.

Many thanks to Walter Hewitt, Elaine Bertand and John McDonald "Halton Sketches".
