1850's Cont'd

Other industries at this time where John Kennedy's mill, foundry, sawmill and blacksmiths shop which were located in the "Silver Creek Tower" area.

A brewery was also established in the 1800's. This was located on the 8th line, one mile east of Hornby and although somewhat removed from the other factories, it was considered one of the "Hungry Hollow" industries. It started off as a log structure, but eventually was constructed of brick. Mr. John Brian, its owner, produced about five thousand barrels of beer annually, using hops grown locally. The brewery employed its own cooper, who made the barrels. Winter ice from a nearby pond was used to cool the beer in summer. The beer could be left for several weeks in an open pail without going flat. Its alcohol content was 30% and transportation to nearby hotels was provided by horse drawn carts.
