GRAND TRUNK 1850 - 1856

The Grand Trunk Railway built its line through Georgetown 1852 - 1856. The station was just east of the Main Street overpass.

Casimir Gzowski, an exile from the Polish revolution of 1830, organized his own heavy construction company in 1853 in Toronto, and was responsible for the building of the Toronto - Sarnia line of the Grand Trunk, which passed through Georgetown. He also built an International Bridge in Niagara. A leading figure in Toronto's inner circles he became very wealthy and was eventually knighted.

He founded the Toronto Rolling Mills' with his partner D.L. MacPherson, and eventually this mill manufactured tons of nails as well as iron for the railway. It was seen as a pioneering plant for large-scale metal industry.

Many thanks to Walter Lewis, Elaine Bertrand and John McDonald "Halton Sketches" Did you have a relative here in the 1800's. If so, please give a call at 877-5296.
