Volunteer Paul Duval of the Saturday Centre for Mentally Handicapped children helps one of the youths prepare their Christmas tree during a party held at St. John's United Church. The Optimist Club attended the party and brought Santa Claus with them to hear what the children wanted for Christmas. (Herald photo)

Christmas in the Glen was the theme of the Glen Williams Public School Christmas concert Dec. 16. The students performed the Little Drummer Boy as well as a choral speaking of The Twelve Months. The Grade 1 students performed A Flea on Santa's Tree. Here, Santa seems to be showing the Jack-in-the-Box what he's got in his bag while the others want a peek too. The cat is Tina Royce, the teddy bear is Alexandra Merrick, Beverly Conway is the Jack-in-the-Box, Santa is dressed up for the play by Derek Harrison and the ballerina is Sarah McEachern. (Herald photo)

The Georgetown Lioness Club was the recipient of a generous financial contribution, which will help them with their invaluable work on projects in the community. Pat Mason (centre), president of the Lioness Club was presented with a cheque for $500, which represented the proceeds raised in Elizabeth's Fashions' Third Annual Bridal Show, held Nov. 29. Making the presentation to Mrs. Mason are Elizabeth McNeilly (left), owner of Elizabeth's Fashions, and Margaret Vint, who was coordinator of the show. (Herald photo)

The nativity scene was re-enacted by youngsters at the Georgetown Christian Reformed Church last week. The performance was called Rainbow of Promises and featured a colorful display for the packed audience.

Everyone must have left the church fully enriched by the Christmas message. Here, shepherds watch over the little baby Jesus asleep in the manger. (Herald photo)

There was an extremely good turnout from the Georgetown Christian Reformed Church congregation to watch the children and young teens perform the musical production of Rainbow of Promises. Everyone was involved in the event, which included acting out the coming of Jesus and songs to express the joy surrounding the event. Here, three wise men prepare for their journey. (Herald photo)

Mary and Joseph seem content with their new baby. Park Public School held their Christmas Pageant Dec. 18. The play included the three wise men, angels shining stars and singing choirs. (Herald photo)

Oxbow Books of downtown Georgetown was first runner-up for having the best shop window downtown. Here, employee Debbie Scott accepts the award on behalf of store owner Norman Holt and his wife Ruth Holt. Also helping with the design of the window were Maria Jennings and customers who donated teddy bears. (Herald photo)

TEMPLETON INTERNATIONAL

Is Templeton Canadian Fund Right For Your RRSP?

If you're looking for short term gains, perhaps not. But if you want your retirement funds managed for secure, long-term growth you should consider it.

The Templeton approach to investment is clear. They buy securities that are not popular with other investors. They hold them for an average of over five years and sell when others come to recognize their true value. So it's a long-term approach - one which is not concerned with the short-term ups and downs of the stock market.

And it works!

If you had invested $10,000 in Templeton Growth Fund* at its inception in November, 1954, it would have grown, despite all the market fluctuations, to $1,289,603 by April 30, 1987.

Templeton Canadian Fund, introduced in 1983, is eligible for your RRSP and follows the same Templeton philosophy. Its performance has been comparable to that of Templeton Growth Fund in its early years.
