

Treated water business

Everyone wants to save time and money. And everyone drinks water.

Manager Pauline McNelly of Aquafine Fine Water Centres Inc. belongs to a business which gives its customers "low cost luxury", she says.

The native of Georgetown says that treated water saves not only money but also time. Her product also offers better results for doing laundry, cleanliness and the protection of fixtures.

Mrs. McNelly is a graduate of Georgetown District High School. Her mother-in-law is another businesswoman, Elizabeth McNelly of Elizabeth's Fashions and One Step Ahead.

Aquafine has been in business for 20 years and Pauline has been working for the company for over eight years. There are nine sales staff, two clerical workers and five technicians.

The company has been in Georgetown over 20 years and is a completely owned full-line water treatment manufacturer and retailer.

Some of the products and services provided by the firm include water softeners, refiners, filters for iron, dirt and sulphur, bacteria control and chlorination systems. There is also a complete service department at the office in Georgetown at 348 Guelph Street.

Mrs. McNelly has recently hired Lynda Amos who has been promoted into the sales department for the Georgetown area. She said there is "a definite increase in the number of women pursuing a career in the water treatment field."

'For the health of it' at Nature's Emporium

If you're looking for a pure and natural lifestyle - at least in what you eat - Mary Thomas and her Glen Williams store have some products for you.

She is the owner of Nature's Emporium in Glen Williams and works with part-timer Laura Longstreet who "does everything to keep the store going and is well informed and gives friendly service."

MARY THOMAS

The store provides high quality bulk and packaged pure food. This includes organic, and additive and chemical free food. The shop has a complete line of all food supplements and additive free meats and frozen products. There are also products for allergies and sports people.

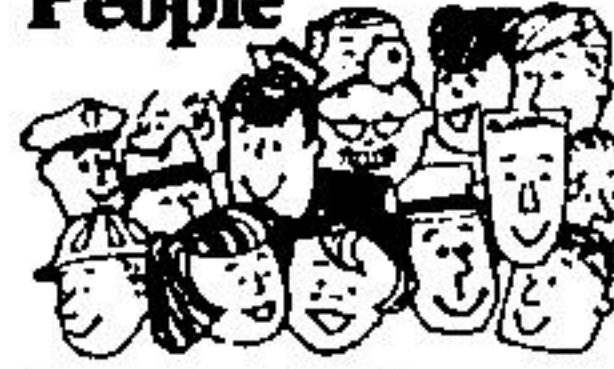

There are a number of new products that have been developed and that are now on sale at Nature's Emporium. They include milk-free frozen products, wheat-free breads and foods for specialty diets. For sale are frozen dinners and natural pastas as well as aluminum-free products such as cheese, baking powder and deodorants.

"Visit or call Nature's Emporium just for the health of it," suggests Mary Thomas. Her goal is to be the best informed shop to meet and supply specialty needs of the public.

She has taught yoga and taken courses in Tai Chi, Shiatsu, homeopathy, back remedies and is continually updating new products and information.
