CEMETERIES IN THE 1850's

In 1837, William Morrison gave land in Stewarttown, on a hill overlooking the west branch of the Credit River, to be used as a cemetery. However, the hill proved too much of a climb for the older people.

Behind St. George's Church, a burial ground also existed that was used by the Anglicans from 1855 on. The funeral parlour was operated by William Wilson, a furniture maker.

The Episcopal Methodists worshipped in a frame church where St. John's United Church now stands, and behind them was the Methodist's cemetery.
