"TRADES" In The 1850's

George Kennedy built a blacksmith shop in 1830 and another blacksmith shop existed on the corner of Guelph and Main from 1839 to 1853, and was operated by Maurice Carrol.

Where the ambulance station now stands a newspaper called "The Canadian Champion" was published.

At the corner of Cross and Main, Thomas Bailey and his son Isalah ran a tailor shop and below them Elijah Travis operated his furniture shop. He was a cabinet maker and in 1847 was said to have employed thirty people.

Several hotels, as discussed in an earlier article, also existed in Georgetown
