STORES IN THE 1850's (Cont'd)

In 1851 Barclay established his store, which was by far the largest of the town's stores. It was located on "Barclay's Block", a row of brick stores on the east side of Main Street, north of Mills Street. Wooden sidewalks and wooden canopies were provided so shoppers could examine the shop windows in comfort. Dress goods were sold here. In the 1960's the store was demolished and replaced by the Royal Bank Building. It is of interest to note that John R. Barber married Francis Barclay's daughter, and in 1865 Francis Barclay was Georgetown's first town clerk.

Henry Wright owned a general retail and produce shop on Main Street and MacLeod built "Mamouth House" where Goodlet's is now.
