Colgate Women's Games

Everyone who has ever participated in a sport has imagined at one time or another that they will become the best in the world at that particular event. Be it the hockey player who thinks they will be the next Wayne Gretzky, the sprinter who thinks that their efforts will surpass those of Ben Johnson, or the common dream of those who partleipate in Olympic sports, that they will succeed by participating in the fabled Olympic Games, the dreams are in many cases what motivate the athlete to continue on in sport.

"The Olympic Dream: Yours To Discover" is the theme for the 11th annual Colgate Women's Games to be conducted on June 11 and 12 at the Metropolitan Toronto Track and Field Centre at York University.

Sponsored by Colgate-Palmolive Canada, the Women's Games are a true grassroots program in that they attempt to attract not only the seasoned track and field competitor but the youngsters who are just making their first tentative steps in the sport.

Open to any female 10 years or older (as of December 31, 1988), the two day event is subdivided into four age categories in order to minimize the disparity in skill levels between the participants. The 12 and 13 year olds and the 14 and 15 year olds will be competing on Saturday, June 11 and the 10 and 11 year olds and those 16 years of age and older will be competing on Sunday, June 12.

Attracting approximately 2,000 entries annually, the Colgate Women's Games offer both athlete and spectator an opportunity to witness the largest female track and field meet in Canada.

More than 16,000 female athletes have participated in the Games since their inception in 1978 and they have come from every province in Canada, as well as the United States, Australia, Great Britain, Bermuda and Sweden to name just a few other countries.

Despite their undeniable national and international appeal, the Games were originally devised to establish a friendly atmosphere for young women to meet, make new friends and have fun while improving their athletic ability with the additional goal of trying to broaden Canada's grassroots track and field program.

There is no entry fee for the entrants nor is there an admission fee for the speciators as Colgate-Palmolive continues to underwrite all costs associated with the event.

Each female who competes at the Colgate Women's Games will receive a free T-shirt and for those who place in the top three of their particular event, Colgate-Palmolive awards unique Grants-In-Aid of Education in varying amounts depending on the athlete's age category and overall placing.

Colgate's philosophy in offering these cash awards, which will total more than $11,000 this year, is to provide financial assistance to encourage young women athletes to continue to expand their knowledge in the activity of their choice.

During the first ten years of the Colgate Women's Games, Colgate-Palmolive have spent more than $1,000,000 in sponsoring the Games. Approximately $110,000 has been distributed to the athletes themselves through the Grants-In-Aid of Education.

In addition to the educational grants, the top three athletes in each event also receive a Colgate Women's Games medal and finalists in all events receive special merchandise awards.

With a variety of individual events on the track and in the field and two special relay events, an Elementary School 4 x 100 metre relay and a Secondary School 4 x 400 metre relay, the Colgate Women's Games are full of excitement for everyone.

At the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, 83 per cent of Canada's female track and field team had participated in the Colgate Women's Games on at least one occasion. The Olympic Dream really is available for discovery at the 11th annual Colgate Women's Games, June 11 and 12.

The entry deadline is May 17, and entry forms and further information about the Colgate Women's Games are available at all local schools and track clubs.

Club Pro Gar Vasey - who has been with Chinguacousy since its inception 27 years ago, says it's very tricky. "There are a lot of trees and water so you have to be very accurate to play here."

Vasey says the hardest hole is the 17th because at 411 yards it is a long par four. What makes it even more difficult, he said, "Is it's uphill all the way and the green is hidden."

To add to the enjoyment of the game, Chinguacousy provides each golfer with 'Pocket Pro Magazine'. This booklet describes the 6300 yard course in detail and includes tips from Vasey on playing all 18 holes.

One of the nicest things about the Club is its clubhouse facilities which include a licensed lounge and restaurant, 3 banquet halls, a ballroom that can hold up to 350 people, tennis courts, swimming pool, satellite television, lockers, sauna and shower facilities.

"We've done extensive renovations to refurbish the clubhouse over the past 3 years," stated Dan Christante, the Club's General Manager. "We're trying to create a very professional golf course and dining operation and want everyone who comes here to have a good time," he added.

Among some of the new features this year, Chinguacousy has started Sunday Brunch from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at a cost of $12.95 with children 12 and under for half price, and Sunday dinner from 5-9 p.m., with a full a la carte menu available. There is also a golf package costing from $38 per person that includes green fees, scoring, dinner and a private room. A wedding package priced from $46 per person is also available and includes fruit punch and alcoholic punch upon arrival, choice of eight dinner selections, one bottle each of red and white wine per table, three hours of open bar service, a three tlered wedding cake and pre-wrapped pieces for all the guests, room fees and decorations, sales taxes and service charges.

Further information on these items can be obtained from Darlene Savoy, the Club's Marketing Representative by calling on the new 24-hour phone line at (416) 457-2949.
