

FWIO addresses concerns

By DORIS CALDER
Herald Special

Concern for the environment, the concern at the needless waste of garbage in Ontario and the thought of needed immediate action, led over 400 women, mainly Women's Institute members to recently attend the Educate/Initiate conference held at Queen's University, Kingston.

Local members who attended were Norine Vanheerwen, Norval W.I.; Lil Given, Ballinafad W.I.; Maisie Lasby, Dublin W.I.; Doris Calder, Silver-Wood W.I.; Jane Baynton, Nassagaweya W.I.; Doris Lindsay, District Program Co-ordinator and President Elect of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario, Peggy Knapp.

The conference, organized by the FWIO, provided an opportunity to learn many of the aspects of waste management and recycling. As well, the workshops helped the members gain new skills to promote various ways in which garbage can be better utilized.

The key note speaker on the Saturday evening was the Honourable Jim Bradley, Ontario's Minister of the Environment.

On the panel discussing ways that garbage can be used more effectively were Al Symmonds, Assistant Regional Director of the Environment, Kingston; John Hansen, Executive Director Recycling Council of Ont.; Pat Salter, Deputy Reeve Township of Peel and Elizabeth Munt, Co-ordinator of Conserve Kingston.

Gained from the conference was the realization that steps must be initiated and implemented to combat the ever increasing problems resulting from improper waste management.

Get tuned up

Young people between the ages of 12 and 21 had better get practising on their symphony-type instruments in order to audition for a place in next year's Halton Youth Symphony. Auditions are being held in Oakville June 2 and June 9. To make appointments for auditions, phone Tina Moffatt at 878-0674 or Peggy Steele at 1-639-1126.

Employee honored

David Olive of Terra Cotta was honored for 20 years service to Sheridan College.

An awards ceremony was held May 12 at the Oakville Campus cafeteria, where the long-service employees were recognized.

Dr. Jack Vallentyne travels the globe with a miniature version of the world around his neck. Dubbed "Johnny Biosphere" he preaches the message of ecology to the children.

POWER fundraiser

Environmentalist to speak

"Johnny Biosphere" alias Dr. Jack Vallentyne, a veritable "Who's Who" of environmental science, will be encouraging POWER members to keep a stiff upper lip in their fight against the proposed Acton quarry dump June 7.

Dr. Vallentyne, a senior scientist at the Canadian Centre for Inland Waters, and a specialist in preaching the hazards to today's environment, will bring his trademark - a globe strapped to his back - to Jack Tanner's Table at the Olde Hide House for a fund raising dinner for the POWER group starting at 6:30 p.m.

Dr. Vallentyne has become known around the world, garnering numerous awards, fellowships and citations for his efforts to save the environment.

His specialty is teaching young people the importance of ecology.

His act includes a talking globe and spraying kids with "acid rain." That tactic, which does not harm the children, seems to drive the message across, he said.

The Yale University graduate has travelled the world in his seven year campaign, which included a failed attempt to have the United Nations declare 1982 the "Year of the Biosphere." The 62-year-old has sat on numerous government boards and has taught at both Queen's and Cornell Universities.

Dr. Vallentyne, who works in Burlington, is fond of his novel approach to the environment. Educating children on the environment gives the world a better chance at the future, he feels. Adults are often too set in their ways to worry about the environment too much, he believes.

"The human reaction to that globe was terrific. I would ride my bicycle down the streets of Burlington with the globe on my back and people would call out to me and break into song. Being a senior scientist, people cannot simply brand me a 'nut'."

Dr. Vallentyne prefers the more graphic approach of audience participation. His presentation includes getting children to breathe in and hold their breath, then telling them they've just breathed some air which has been in the lungs of everyone else in the room.

Only 200 tickets will be sold for the POWER dinner. Each costs $25 and all funds will be used to fight the proposed landfill site, POWER assures.

Tickets are available at the Olde Hide House or by calling 853-0039.

Summer employment looking favorable for school students

By BELINDA SNELL
Herald Special

The Canada Employment Centre for Students encourages high school and post-secondary education students to start in the search for summer employment at least two weeks prior to high school examination week in mid-June.

"Students who are actively seeking jobs should have no problem finding suitable employment for the summer," says Angela Buskard, one of the employees at the Student Employment Centre. They have received numerous requests from employers to fill jobs suitable for high school students over the past few weeks.

Students are able to choose from a wide selection of summer jobs, accompanied by a suitable wage, depending on the type of job requested. The Student Employment Centre is encouraging students to find some type of stable employment as soon as possible so that they can start working part-time and then carry through working full-time once school is let out. In an attempt to increase high school student job awareness, the Canada Employment Centre for Students made a few visits to the Georgetown District High School, Acton High School and Bishop Reding so that interested students could ask questions and fill out application forms.

Students without a social insurance number need not worry as there will be a representative at the Acton Social Services and Information Centre starting June 1, every Wednesday from 4-5 p.m., to help students apply for their social insurance card. Two pieces of identification will be required upon arrival, including a copy of the child's birth certificate.

The Canada Employment Centre for Students urges all teenagers, including Grade 7 and 8 students, to make use of all of the resources that are made available to them, which not only means dropping by the centre to become familiar with the job boards, but includes checking the newspapers and filling out job application forms from various businesses throughout the community. Another thing to keep a watchful eye for is the new weekly column, "Job Tips", which will make its first appearance in the Weekend Outlook starting June 4.
