

Dr. Bandoll kept the crowds entertained, along with his many friends.

Shoppers could enjoy beef on a bun during Pioneer Days, as the Cellar Restaurant staged an outdoor barbecue, to assist the Make-a-Wish Foundation.

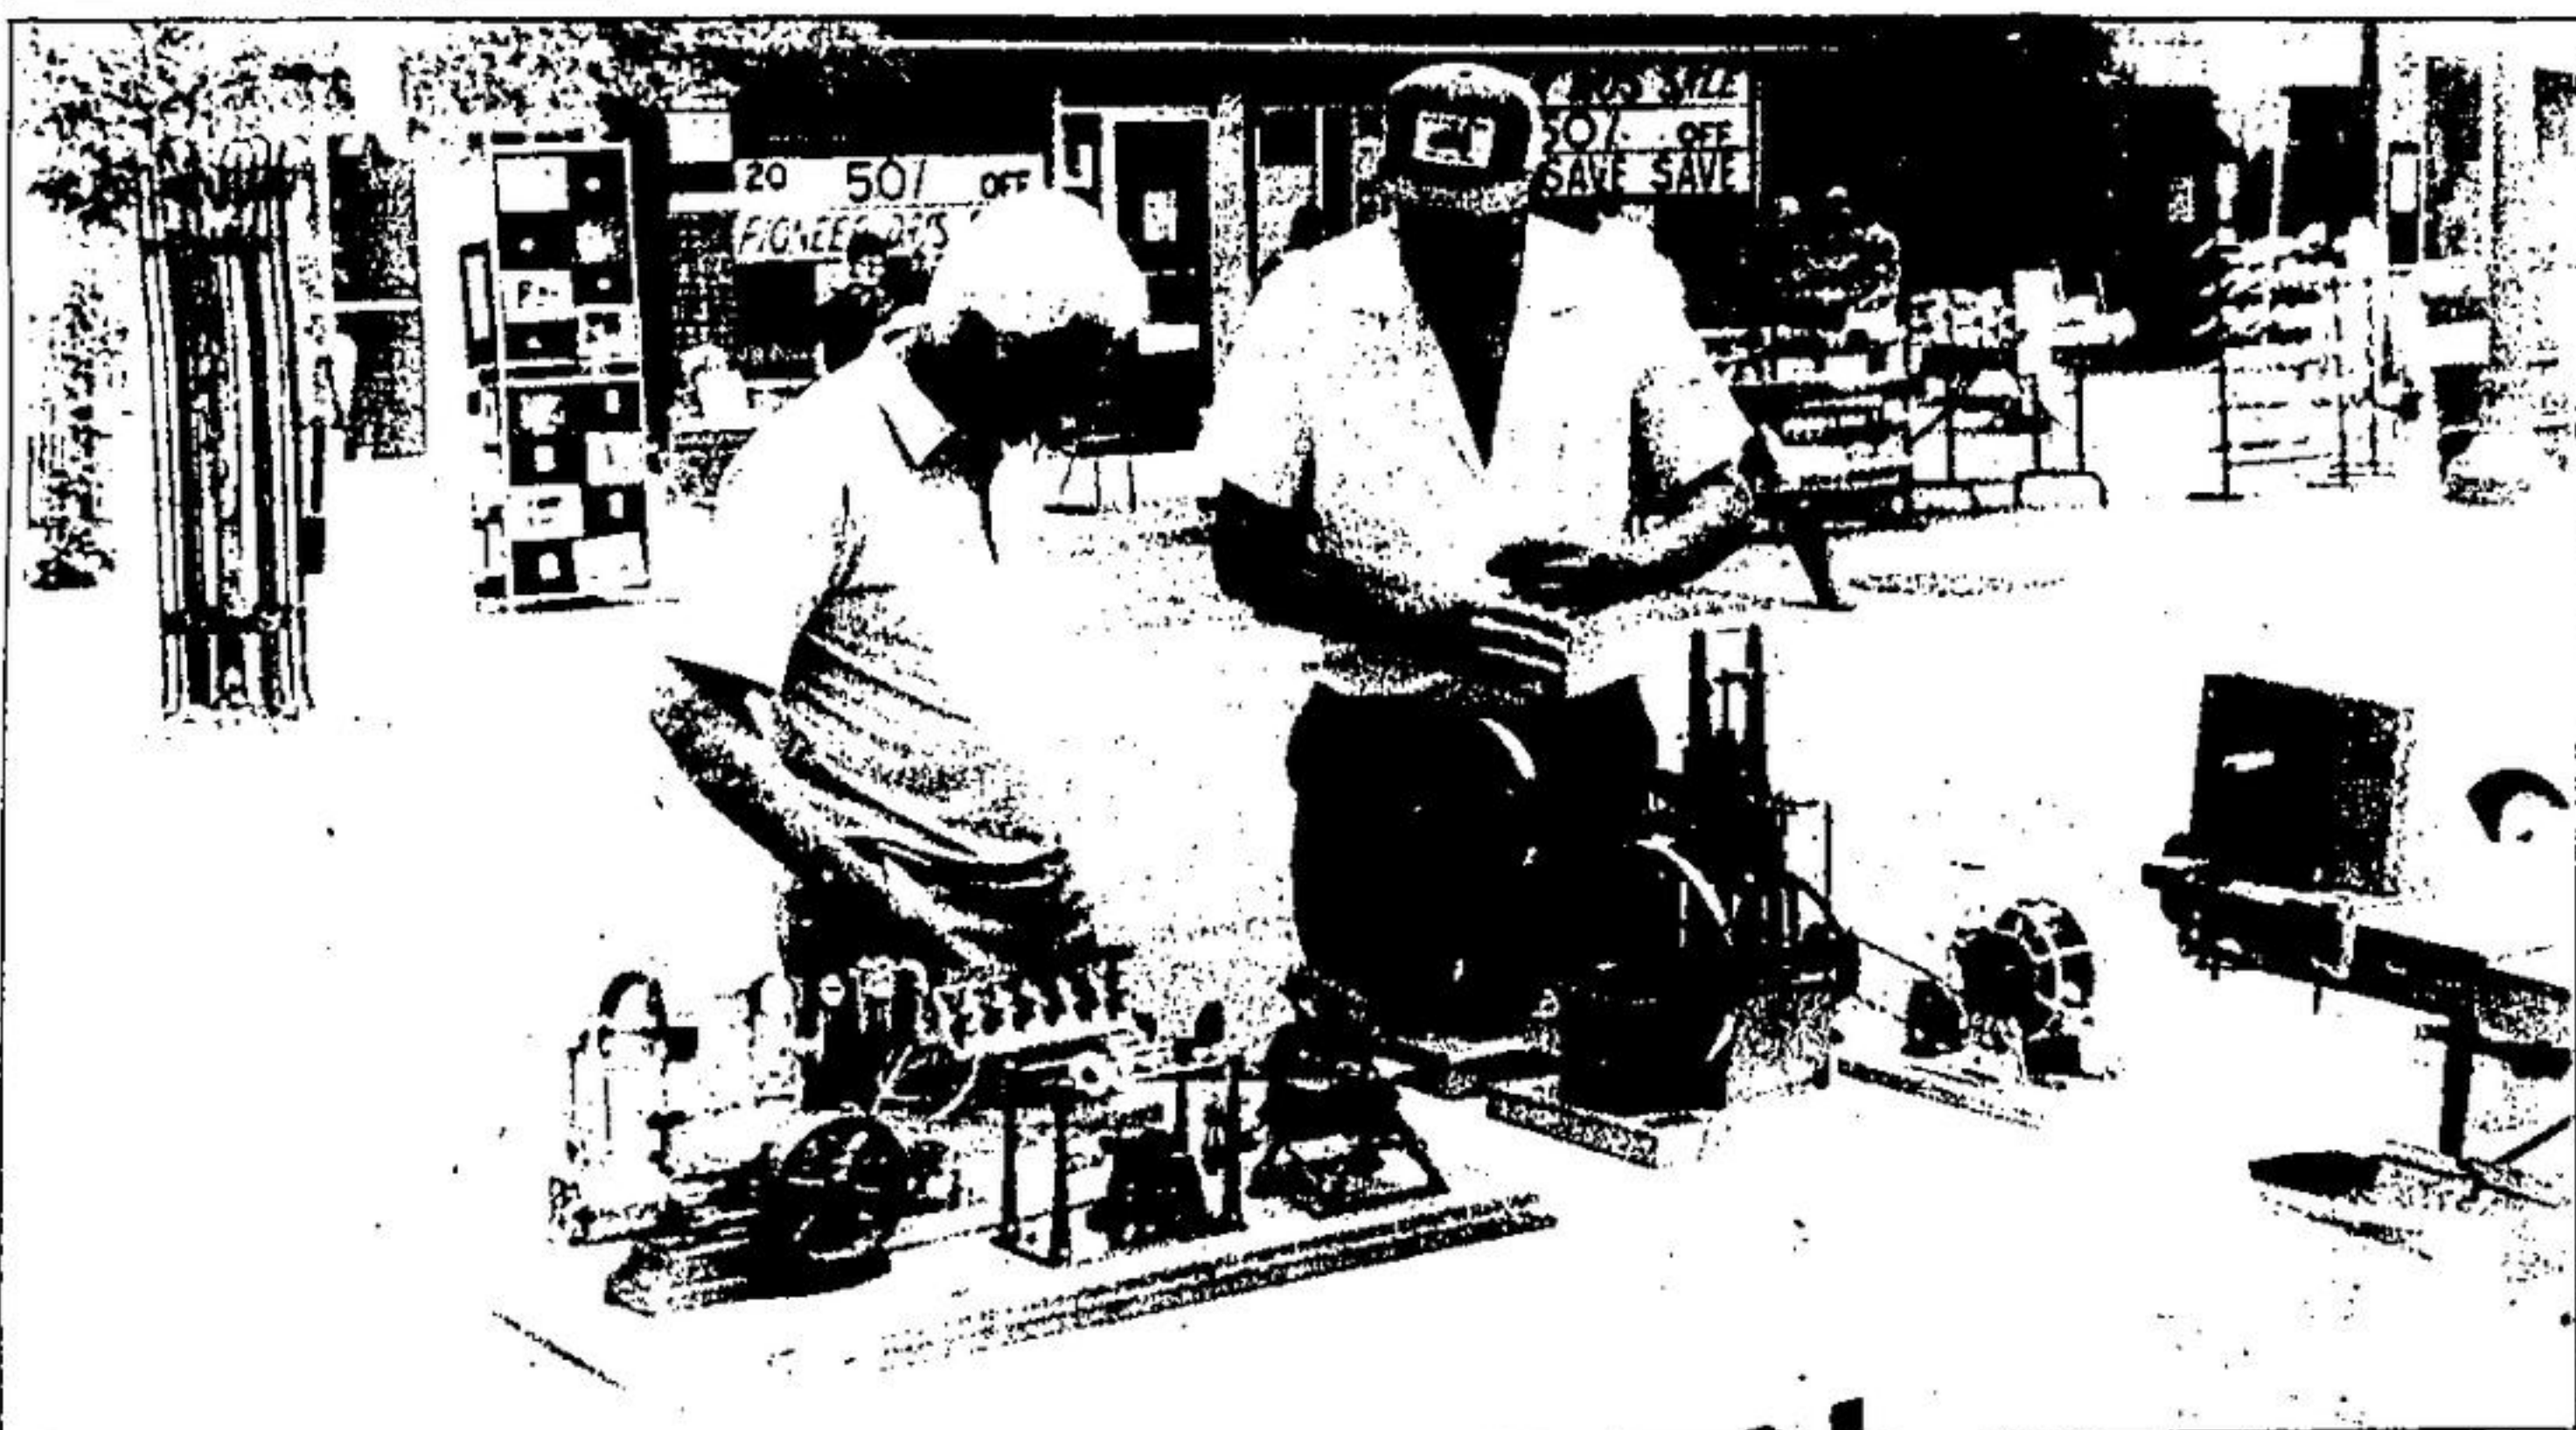

Pioneer Days organizer Margaret Vint and Halton Hills Mayor Russ Miller lead the Georgetown Girls Pipe Band during the opening ceremonies for the weekend.

Folk art painting, presented by Whimsy's, was popular to watch for a lot of people during Pioneer Days.

Photos by Herald staff

Jack Layman drew a lot of attention with his collection of miniature engines he has built himself.

A friendly clown was included in this year's schedule for the local Pioneer Days, when she took the time to decorate young children's faces.

Brianne Evers, 6, and Michelle Smythe, 5, were two face-painted animals roaming the streets of downtown Georgetown.

There were all kinds of bargains at Pioneer Days, as store owners look part in a sidewalk sale.

Irwin Noble was named the Herald Pioneer Citizen for 1988. He is seen here (right) with Margaret Vint, organizer of Pioneer Days, and Myles Glison, who presented the Pioneer plaque.

Dr. Bandoll places a balloon hat on five-year-old Victoria Levitt.

Irwin Noble has been named Pioneer Citizen of the Year for 1988. Mr. Noble was presented with a plaque Saturday at the Downtown Pioneer Days celebrations, on behalf of The Herald newspaper, which sponsors the honor each year. Mr. Noble has been a resident in Georgetown for close to 40 years. For 21 years, he operated the Georgetown Dairy, first at their downtown location, and then when they moved to their new Guelph Street location. Mr. Noble was a member of town council for three years in the 1960s, and has served on the planning board, and the committee of adjustment, and he and his wife Joyce, were named Citizens of the Year in 1978, for their contributions to the community. Mr. Noble has also been a driver for the Cancer Society for 20 years, and has been active serving in various capacities with the Masonic Lodge. He has been an avid curler for 30 years, and was one of the original members of the North Halton Golf and Country Club. Mr. and Mrs. Noble have been longtime members of St. George's Anglican Church, and in the last year, Mr. Noble has started the Georgetown Senior Men's Luncheon Club, which meets on a monthly basis. Fittingly, Mr. Noble now resides on Noble Court, which was named for him as a member of town council.