THE TANNERY (Cont'd)

Thomas McLam was one of the workers at the tannery. His job was to grind the hemlock bark. He lived in a cottage on Main Street with his wife and seven children. He and his wife were Irish and Thomas was a cobbler by trade.

Many farmers in those days were clearing new land, and every hemlock tree cut down provided bark for the tannery. All winter long, the farmer would bring the bark back to the tannery. As many as 20 or 30 farmers, with wagons and horses would arrive in one day. The farmers received $3 - $4 a cord for the hemlock. Once paid, they would visit one of four local taverns before making their way back home. They came from Esquesing, Nassagaweya, Speyside, Knatchbull and St. Helena, Erinand Eramosa.
