Students helping out on civic centre project

Students from Halton Hills will begin a fundraising project in September to purchase three flagpoles for the Civic Centre.

There are 11 schools in the Halton Hills family of schools and all will be participating. Each school has its own fundraising ideas and will work towards the total of $5,000 to be raised. The project is spearheaded by Park School principal, Jack Peckitt, along with committee members Jack Reid from Glen-Williams and Carol Matheson from George Kennedy.

Mr. Peckitt arranged for 200 Park School students to tour the site on the second last day of school. Carrying flags from their classrooms, the children marched along Maple Avenue and had a 20-minute tour of the site.

It was a learning experience for the children who will be able to compare the building in its partial and finished stages. Since Park School students are closest to the construction site, it was a chance to forewarn students not to play there during the summer. An added benefit was the fun of an outing, with Grade 5 students enjoying their role in helping the Kindergarten students. Flagpoles and flags were chosen from a number of donation projects available because they are a highly visible contribution which the children can enjoy seeing as they drive by. Jack Peckitt feels that student involvement will help spread enthusiasm for the Civic Centre as well as raise funds.

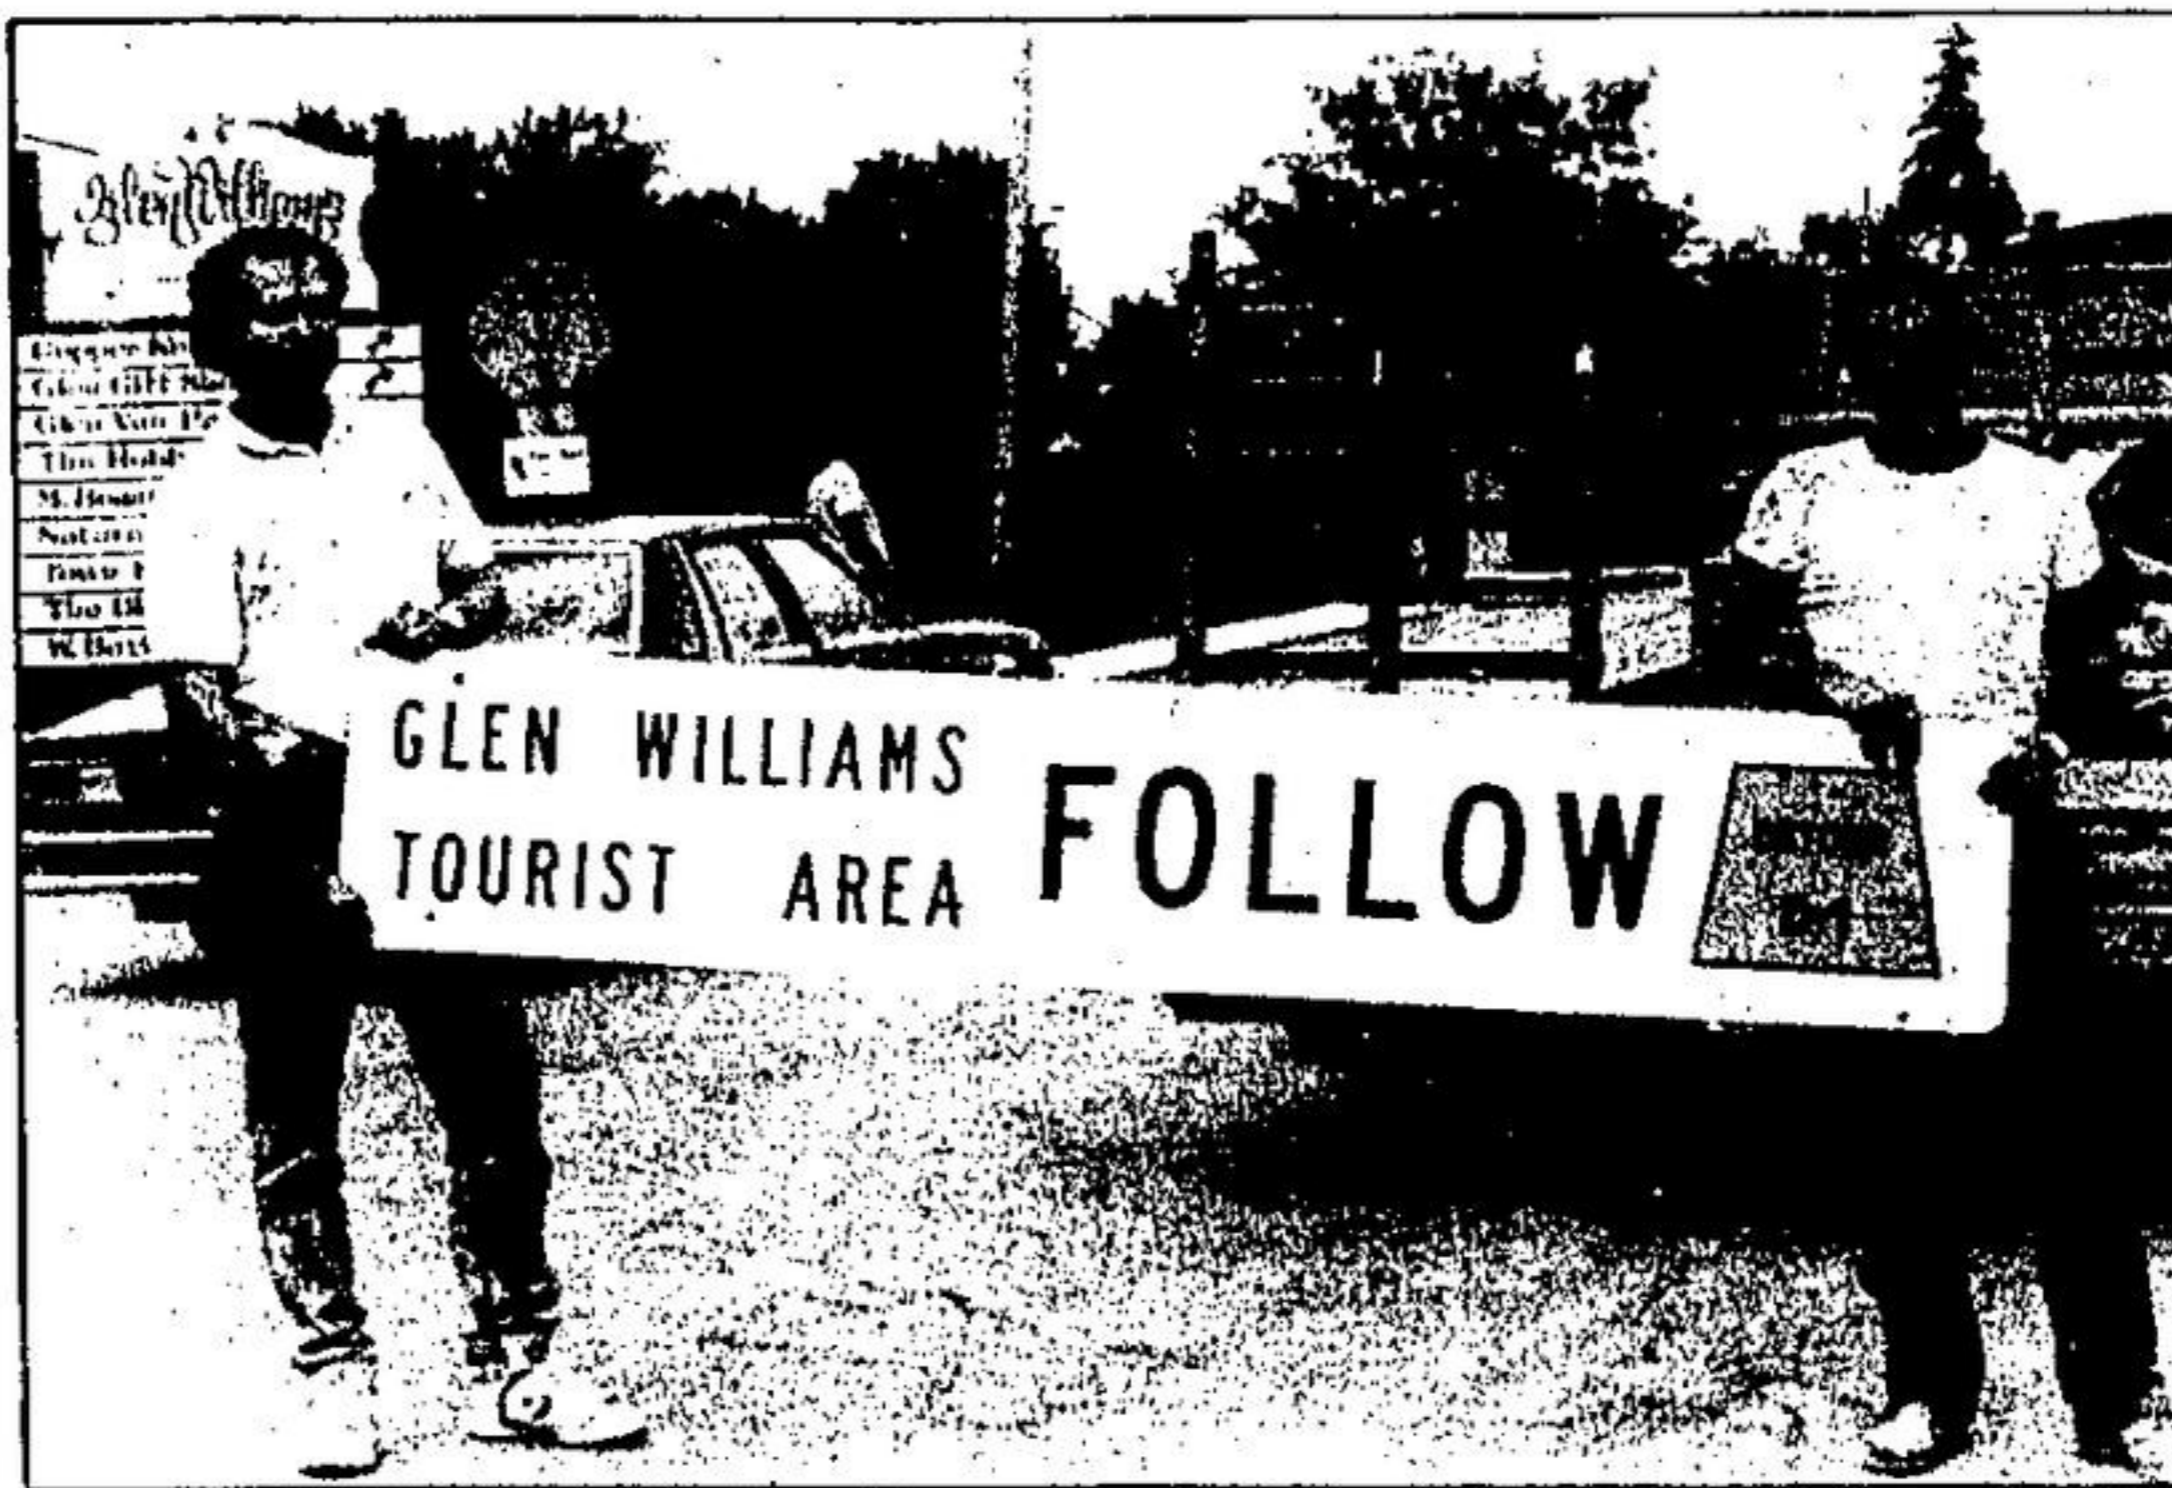

Mr. Peckitt hopes that next May, at the grand opening of the centre, the students can feel proud that they were 'part of the process' and helped make it happen. If you would like to join the students of Halton Hills in helping to beautify our new Civic Centre, call Fred Helson at 877-5206 or Gary Brand at 873-0300.

Councillors on the move retain seat

Law doesn't change status

By BRIAN MACLEOD
Herald Staff

A new provincial law which forced a Milton councillor to be re-appointed to council because he moved out of town will not affect Halton Hills Councillor John McDonald.

Bill 106, an amendment to the Municipal Elections Act, states councillors must either live in the municipality they represent or own interest in property or a business there.

Mr. McDonald, who represents Ward 3 at Halton Region and on town council, moved to Milton last September. He works at Rothmans-Benson and Hedges in Toronto.

But he won't have to take the same route as a counterpart in Milton. Coun. Wray Lamont moved from Campbellville to Flamborough since the last election and under the new law, which took effect June 8, he is no longer qualified to represent his constituents as a councillor.

He rented a vacant building in Campbellville in early July. That allowed him to be sworn in again to represent his ward.

Halton Hills Administrator-Clerk Dan Costea said the two municipalities simply have different interpretations of the law. Milton said the law takes effect immediately and had their councillor take appropriate steps to comply.

However, Halton Hills sought legal advice, said Mr. Costea.

"Our legal advice and discussions with the Ministry of Municipal Affairs have indicated that isn't absolutely necessary," he said of re-appointing of the councillor.

He said the law is not retroactive. That means anyone who moved out of town before June 8 does not fall under the statute of the new law.

Another interpretation is that anyone who qualified as an elector at any time during the recent term is eligible to run. Coun. McDonald qualified as an elector until he moved out of town 11 months ago.

Coun. McDonald, who said he won't run again this year (he could rent space in town and make himself eligible) said the law was really intended to take effect after the November elections.

"I'm quite satisfied with that," he said.

However, if he had to take steps to make sure he is legally performing his duties, he would.

"If I had to do something to make sure I would," said Coun. McDonald.

"I'd do whatever I had to do to make it right."

However, George Manios, a policy advisor at the Ministry of Municipal Affairs, said the new law was intended to take effect June 8 but it's up to each municipality to decide how to interpret it.

Council is required to make a decision on whether or not councillors must take action to make sure they are legally performing their duties, said Mr. Manios.

"It's up to each council to decide."

If Halton Hills has legal advice that says Councillor McDonald does comply with the law then that decision stands, he said.
