G T R STATION AND TANNERY

Eventually, the local hemlock bark was used up, and so it was brought by train from wider afield. 10,000 cords per year of hemlock bark were transported from the station to the tannery.

Sculpture acid was also brought to the tannery by train.

Twelve carboys of concentrated sulphuric acid provided a load for the tannery team and cart to transfer from the station to the tannery.

This was a dangerous job as the concentrated corrosive acid could cause severe burns if spilled.
