Dairy princess advances at CNE

NORVAL-Congratulations to Lynda Thompson of RR4, Georgetown, the Peel County Dairy Princess who competed at the Canadian National Exhibition on Aug. 25 and along with the Carleton Dairy Princess won the right to compete again on Aug. 29 in the semifinals. Eleven princesses competed last Thursday and 42 princesses, representing their respective counties, took part each evening from Wednesday to Saturday.

Following the semifinals on Aug. 29 and 30, the finals will be held on Wednesday, Aug. 31 in the main ring of the coliseum.

Each princess gave a two to three minute talk on one of five subjects pertaining to the dairy industry. Lynda drew the subject "Your Favorite Dairy Food" and had a couple of minutes to put her thoughts together, while the princess ahead of her was speaking. Lynda is the daughter of Roy and Heather Thompson of RR4 Georgetown.

50th anniversary

NORVAL-Congratulations to Jim and Christina Best of RR2 Norval who will be married 50 years on Sept. 17.

Their two sons, Gordon and his wife Patricia, and Murray and his wife Barbara, both reside in Streetsville. Six grandchildren Tracy, Jamie, Jennifer, Jeffrey,

Donald and Cynthia all enjoy visiting their grandparents. Jim spent two years in the navy during the last war and saw a good part of the world at that time.

The couple have enjoyed several trips since retirement and for the last 18 years Jim has been in the business of sharpening saws and gardening tools from their own home on Heritage Road. Unfortunately Christina suffered a stroke last March and has been a patient in Peel Memorial Hospital since then. Their many friends and neighbors extend best wishes on this special anniversary. Arrangements have been made for Christina to receive visitors at the conference room, Ward 4-B of Brampton Hospital for the afternoon.

Another fine mess to sort out

Whose mess is this anyway? In last week's Queen's Park Report I said that since we all help produce the garbage that goes to make up the contents of a "sanitary landfill", we all have a right and duty to help determine how the garbage disposal problem is solved. I am not suggesting that we each maintain and monitor our own backyard garbage dump but that society must maintain ultimate control of this type of activity because of its potential to harm all of us. Stated bluntly, the question is: "Does private enterprise have any place in the garbage disposal business?"

At the risk of being accused of sounding like a politician I am going to suggest that the answer is both yes and no. Government should not be doing those things that private enterprise can do more efficiently. The problem in this case is that efficiency has more to do with safety than profit. It hardly seems reasonable to ask a business to continually forego its profit in the public interest. It is equally unreasonable to ask society to believe that an intelligent businessman is going to do this.

Garbage dumps have become such large scale operations that they are taking resources away from other important municipal undertakings. How can we ensure both immediate and long term safety as well as allow municipalities to get on with the other elements of the business of governing?

A partnership between business and government would seem to provide some of the answers. This partnership could take several forms. At its simplest it might consist of a municipal government contracting out the management of a site to a private company while retaining the right to monitor site safety as well as determine tipping fees. Various levels of government might enter into agreements to use private sites provided they retain the ultimate right to monitor both the site and its safety and the type of waste that is being dumped. Co-operative ventures might be arranged where the participating government was responsible for landfilling but invited private concerns onto the site to set up and operate recycling and energy from waste facilities.

Dandies notch another win

By BETTY SOJKA

The Jim Dandies tucked another win under their caps after a game played with Double Trouble. Marion, the Jim Dandies' pitcher, was in top pitching form.

The tombstones in the cemetery are being vandalized and toppled over. These stones have stood for many years and it is truly a shame when individuals have to seek their fun through destruction. Please report to the police if you see any mischief going on in the cemetery.

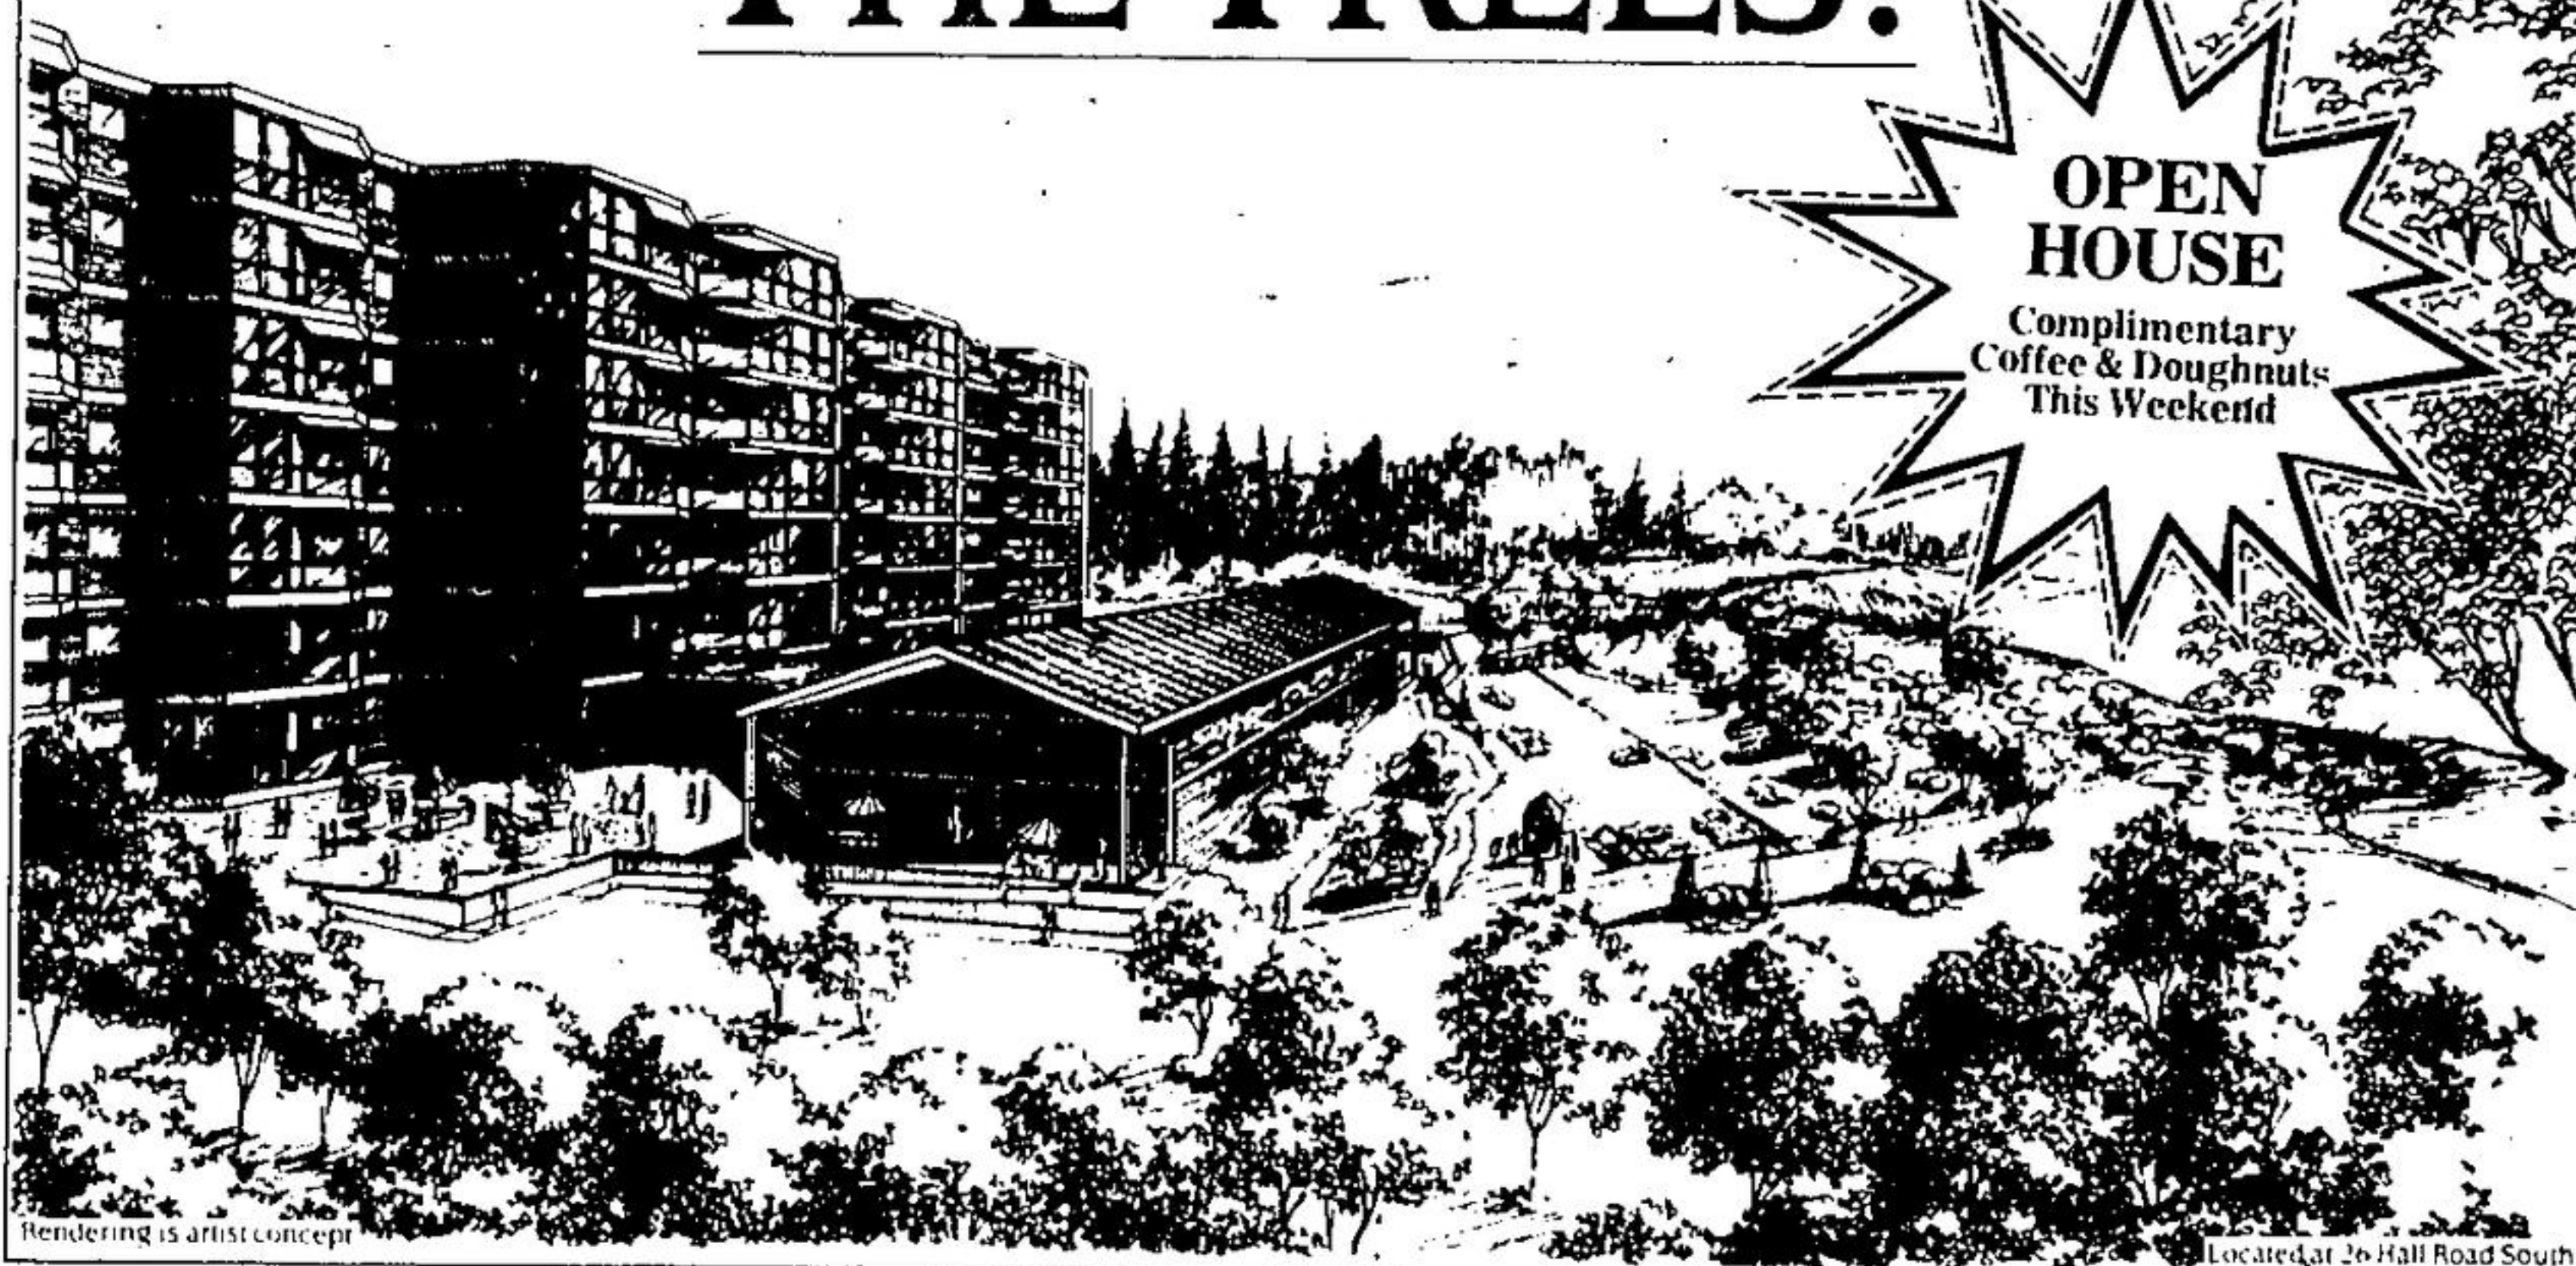

The wheelchair ramp has now been completed at the Community Centre. Andrews and Shortills have submitted a bid for the baseball diamond. This bid will be reviewed at the Hall Board meeting slated for Aug. 31. A representative from the Halton Hills Recreation Department will attend this meeting also to discuss the possibility of funding for the new diamond. Plans will be made for the upcoming Corn Roast Dance on Sept. 10.
