Public receives accurate AIDS information

A recent survey of the Ministry of Health's advertising and public information campaign on AIDS, launched in March, shows it continues to be successful in giving the public accurate information, Health Minister Elinor Caplan said recently.

"I am delighted to report that this campaign is already having a substantial effect in dispelling myths about AIDS, educating Ontarians about how it is transmitted, how they can protect themselves from contracting it and how they can obtain more information," said Mrs. Caplan. "These results are clear from the monitoring that is an essential part of the campaign."

A series of questions related to the key areas of the educational campaign was posed to different, randomly chosen groups of 600 people at four stages of the campaign: before it began, after two weeks of radio ads, after three weeks of TV ads, and, most recently, after four more weeks of TV ads and distribution of the question-and-answer brochure, "AIDS: Let's Talk" to every household in the province.

In May, over 3.4 million copies of the English version were distributed across the province by mail. Another 133,365 in French were inserted in French-language publications and distributed through cultural organizations. A further 285,000 in Italian, Portuguese, Spanish, Greek, Chinese and Vietnamese were distributed in publications for each of these ethnic communities.

The pamphlet was intended to dispel commonly held myths about AIDS and to provide reliable information on how to avoid contracting it. The survey found that more than 87 per cent considered the pamphlet useful.

One of the main aims of the campaign is to encourage people who need information to call the AIDS hotline (in Toronto call 392-AIDS; elsewhere in the province, toll free 1-800-668-AIDS) where confidential, frank information on AIDS is available, 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily.

The response has been overwhelming. The number of calls received in the week following distribution of the pamphlet rose 74 per cent over the previous week to 10,067. Calls are now averaging over 2,000 per week, triple the average before the campaign. From the March 22 launch of the campaign to Sept. 4, a total of 93,650 have been received.

Trained counsellors can also take calls in French (1-800-267-SIDA), from the hearing impaired (1-800-267-7712), or in other languages (in Toronto, 392-AIDS) elsewhere in Ontario, 1-800-668-AIDS). A Chinese speaking counsellor is available Friday evenings after 4 p.m. and the Chinese community is being informed. Service in more languages will be added as counsellors can be hired to answer questions from the members of Ontario's many cultural communities.

"The monitoring also indicates the campaign is achieving its goal of dispelling commonly held myths about how AIDS is transmitted. Those interviewed were asked to express how strongly they agreed or disagreed with a number of statements on a scale from one to 10. Those key statements are listed below, with the percentage who most strongly agreed or disagreed with them; that is, gave them a one or a 10 before the campaign and at the last survey:

"AIDS is a disease only homosexuals get." Before campaign: 70 per cent disagreed strongly. After three months of campaign: 78 per cent disagreed strongly.

"You can get AIDS from kissing someone with AIDS." Before campaign: 47 per cent disagreed strongly. After three months of campaign: 66 per cent disagreed strongly.

"You can get AIDS from working with someone who has AIDS." Before campaign: 78 per cent disagreed strongly. After three months of campaign: 86 per cent disagreed strongly.

"You can get AIDS from a toilet seat." Before campaign: 69 per cent disagreed strongly. After three months of campaign: 84 per cent disagreed strongly.

"You can get AIDS from sharing a lunch with someone who has AIDS." Before campaign: 65 per cent disagreed strongly. After three months of campaign: 81 per cent disagreed strongly.

"You can get AIDS from touching or shaking hands with someone who has AIDS." Before campaign: 81 per cent disagreed strongly. After three months of campaign: 88 per cent disagreed strongly.

"You can get AIDS from sharing needles while doing drugs with someone who has AIDS." Before campaign: 68 per cent agreed strongly. After three months of campaign: 91 per cent agreed strongly.
