Commercial/Industrial Lot Levy Study

The Regional Municipality of Halton has undertaken a study to investigate the viability and appropriateness of charging a lot levy to all new commercial and industrial developments in Halton Region. This charge would be paid by the developer prior to construction.

The complete study and proposed amounts are available to any interested party by calling Gary Scandlan, Regional Finance Department, at the numbers set out below. Extension 359. Regional Council invites comments on this study by January 17, 1989.

Scotsdale Farm is back in picture for board

The Halton Board of Education will negotiate for at least "shared" access to Scotsdale Farm near Ballinacree.

In a 10-6 vote, Board trustees opted to amend a motion put forward by Acton trustee Arlene Bruce. Trustee Bruce appealed to Board members to enter into negotiations with the Ontario Heritage Foundation before the Dufferin-Peel Separate Board gains exclusive access to Scotsdale's facilities.

"Scotsdale Farm is what you might say, on the auction block at the present time. If you pass up Scotsdale at this time, a year hence we may be sorrowfully wishing we had such a facility," she said.

Trustee Bruce's recommendation brought before trustees Thursday night asked for the Halton Board to be "major user" of the 540-acre area with a "working farm," streams, trees and waterfalls.

But trustees objected to Halton's exclusive use, especially in light of Dufferin-Peel's "vigorous" negotiations with the OHF.

Georgetown Board trustee Dick Howitt said "another look" at Scotsdale is necessary, and said "perhaps we could discuss sharing the facilities with other boards."

Trustee Howitt was formerly on record as opposing a deal with the OHF for Scotsdale because it would be "too costly" if the Halton Board were to manage and maintain the farm.

The six trustees who voted against negotiations for Scotsdale, which could cost the Board up to $31,000 according to Board staff member Sue Amos, said Halton already has "terrific" outdoor education facilities.

"We don't have to go and spend huge chunks of dollars," said Burlington trustee Peter Abbott. Our programs are "tailored to Halton Region," he said.

And other trustees rejected the financial commitment of Scotsdale. "We have so many other pressing needs in this system. I can't justify this kind of spending to taxpayers," said Burlington trustee Diane Filman.

In a presentation by Ms. Amos, the Board was told of two alternatives for use of Scotsdale. Alternative One would cost a total of $31,000 and would include the addition of two portables, two washrooms, hydro and water power installations, a small parking area and yearly management costs of $15,000.

Alternative Two, as presented to the Board, would see the OHF providing $140,000 in capital funding to be paid with interest during a 20-year lease period. The first year, the Halton Board would pay $38,000, the second year, about $34,000.

But Pauline Laing, Superintendent of Curriculum Services said the suggested funding has not been negotiated by the Board but is "a suggested starting point."

At an October board meeting, Mrs. Bruce asked trustees to waive the rules to enter into "immediate" negotiations for Scotsdale Farm with the OHF. Her motion was rejected. Thursday night, Burlington trustee Dave Coos offered an amendment to Mrs. Bruce's recommendation.

"If our staff feel this strongly (about Scotsdale) there must be good reason," he said. He suggested another report be presented to the Board. "I don't think we've entirely done our homework."

Despite the amendment, some trustees remained opposed to Scotsdale negotiations. Burlington trustee Noel Cooper said trustee Bruce was giving the Board a "sales pitch. I can't support this (motion)," he said.

And Burlington trustee Peter Abbott said because he doesn't want to "duplicate" services in Halton, he would not support a Scotsdale negotiation "in any way, shape or form."

In support of Scotsdale, trustees Marg Bullock (Burlington), Patty Wilcox (Oakville) and Bob Clarke (Milton), said they would agree to sharing the facilities with other school boards.

The Board will enter negotiations with the OHF and will return results to trustees for review. More in depth information will be provided for trustees at a later date, according to Board chairman Pat Hillhouse.
