Dreams of a white kitchen can come true

Today's dream kitchens are light and airy.

It's easy to create a new light kitchen in a new house or a complete remodeling with new white models from appliance manufacturers. Appliances like Jenn-Air's new Designer Line White group are part of the trend to light kitchens.

Design-wise and function-wise, they are light years away from the white appliances of a couple of generations ago. The lines are sleek, the details are decorative and the materials—such as new white heat-resistant glass—are space-age.

But what if you cannot replace all your appliances with new white or are stuck with serviceable dark wood cabinets?

There are ways to go light and airy even when a new kitchen is out of the question, according to Ann Vaughan, Jenn-Air's Director of Consumer and Public Relations. Here are some of her suggestions:

- Inventory the appliances you are keeping when remodeling to determine which can go light. A white panel may be hidden under a harvest gold dishwasher or compactor front—for a good many years, many models have come equipped with one or two reversible panels.
- Dig out the appliance's installation or use-and-care information for instructions on switching panels or adding inserts. Many refrigerators, dishwashers and trash compactors can be fitted with wood or laminate panels to match lighter cabinets or wallpaper.
- Investigate ways to turn dark wood cabinets into light. One means is stripping the old finish and then giving the raw wood a light wash or pickled finish. Painting over the dark may be easier.
- If the cabinets have plain wood fronts, panels can be created with wood (or plastic) molding before painting.
- Look for wallpaper to tie together colors if you are combining new white appliances with those of other colors. That old harvest gold refrigerator may not look as dated and out of place if the wallpaper combines white with harvest gold.
- Take full advantage of light coming in through windows. The bare-window look is current. If softening is needed, it can be accomplished with a valance, such as shirred fabric or a strip of lace, or by a hanging plant. A beveled and etched glass panel can create privacy without cutting out light.
- Keep details and accessories light, too—choose baskets with washed finishes, pale-framed pictures, airy flower arrangements, white cabinet door pulls.
- Update old flooring with new lighter colors. If cost is a factor, lighten a dark floor with an accent rug (well anchored), such as a pastel dhurrie.
- Fine tune lighting. Cool white and warm white fluorescent and incandescent bulbs all affect colors differently.
- Coordinate your whites, since not all whites are alike. A white metal surface may differ from one in white plastic, wood or vinyl.

One of the advantages of an appliance group like Jenn-Air's Designer Line White is that whites, color accents and details are coordinated.

Jenn-Air's group includes a grill-range cooktop and a grill-range (both equipped for the indoor grilling with downdraft ventilation that Jenn-Air pioneered), electronically controlled Selective-Use™ wall oven, electronically controlled dishwasher and a compactor. Jenn-Air also offers 10 white refrigerators.

CONGREGATIONAL METHODISTS

This group first attended the church at Swackhammer's Hill (Churchill). In 1876 they decided to build a large church at John and Church Streets. Alas, they couldn't afford it long. Dr. McCollough of Georgetown held the mortgage. He sold it to the Salvation Army who in their turn sold it to the Roman Catholics. The Congregationalists returned to Churchill, eventually becoming the United Church until it was closed in 1968. It was reopened as a Community Church.

 Many thanks to Mark Rowe, President of the Esqueving Historical Society, who wrote this article.
