Newcomers meet

The Georgetown Newcomers provide an excellent opportunity for people to get to know others in the community.

Meetings are particularly of interest to women, but the Newcomers also offer family outings and monthly social clubs to include spouses.

The next meeting for the Georgetown Newcomers is Wednesday, Jan. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Andrew's United Church, 89 Mountainview Rd.

Guest speaker will be Barbara Martin, a skin care and make-up consultant from Mary Kay Cosmetics. There will also be a scarf-tying demonstration.

For more information on the Georgetown Newcomers, contact Deb at 877-7878 or Elaine at 873-0200.

Super show

Don't forget the second show of the University Women's Club Super Sunday series with Kim and Jerry Brodey, Jan. 22 at 1:30 p.m. and 3:30 p.m. at the John Elliott Theatre.

Tickets for the 3:30 p.m. show are still available for $8.50 for both the Kim and Jerry show and Tanglefoot on April 2.

For further information call 877-1575 or 877-4786.

Salvage operation

Council vetoes rezoning

An application to rezone a portion of Armstrong Avenue to allow a metal recycling firm to expand has been turned down by the town of Halton Hills.

Wayne Olson, owner of Monarch Resource Recovery and Transfer Ltd., appeared before town council last week asking for rezoning for his property which abuts the soon-to-be-built Sands condominium complex.

Mr. Olson recycles metal and he was seeking permission to store the metal outside for a period of time.

But that requires a salvage licence and no licence could be granted until the zoning was approved.

Town councillors were told by staff that the firm is operating illegally now because it is not zoned correctly.

Objections to the rezoning came from members of the Sands and from two local businesses who said the operation would be unsightly.

Last week, Coun. Gerald Rennie asked for the matter to be deferred, fearing a refusal of the rezoning application would shut down a much-needed business in the town.

However, Monday Coun. Rennie said he is "satisfied that if the rezoning is not granted, it won't put (Monarch) out of business."

Mr. Olson has indicated he can move his business to a site with the proper zoning, said Coun. Rennie.

He said he made his decision "without reference to the Sands" which came along well after Monarch Resources.

And it would be exaggerating to call the aluminum smelter, which Mr. Olson operates on the property, "obnoxious," as previous reports have done, said Coun. Rennie.

But the owner was fined $250 five years ago for not complying with regulations and he is due to be charged on March 2, Coun. Rennie said.

Lawyer Herbert Arnold appeared before council, claiming that Monarch meets all of the requirements of the licence and the Halton Hills official plan except the zoning requirements.

The Sands only recently received permission to build one 17-floor building instead of two eight-storey buildings as the original 1974 zoning permitted, said Mr. Arnold.

Fences around Monarch block off six floors from view of the condominium, he said. Then, only the top two floors would have been able to see the yard of the company, he added.

He asked the town not to refuse the application, but to send it to the site plan committee to get their input.

Mayor Russ Miller, who sits on the site plan committee, said it would be an "awkward thing" to deal with there.
