New video programs now available

Happy soles

Dear Sir, A very healthy and fun activity called line dancing has become so popular with "Seniors" that we are desperately in need of more floor space for our lessons. Our teacher, Sylvia Liles, calls us "Happy Soles" and we are very happy souls now.

Knowing that Branch 120, Royal Canadian Legion, Georgetown has always supported community endeavors, a call was made to Norm Ward, Community Affairs Chairman, for Branch 120, for the use of their auditorium on a weekly basis.

We are happy to report that after consulting with the Executive of Branch 120 we have indeed been granted this space.

On behalf of the "Happy Soles" dancers and our teacher, Sylvie Liles, we wish to thank Norm Ward and the Executive of Branch 120 for their generosity. Once again the Legion has come forward with another much-needed community service.

Sincerely, Mid Brunski

Other side

Dear Sir, Recently I picked up a small pile of trade magazines dealing with waste management. The general content of these is lobbying on how wonderful a job these businesses are doing.

Articles run from the federal Minister of the Environment expressing the view that Canadians should pay more for water in order that industry might stop polluting it. (this argument didn't make much sense to me), to controlling public opinion and how to convince them there is no threat to ground water even if we keep on contaminating it at the present rate.

All this is fair enough, but who is writing articles about the foam on Silver Creek (March 16, 1989), and other less obvious arguments against this steady barrage of industrial propaganda?

Sincerely, Kit Woode,

Halton Credit Union has announced it is offering the Financial Fitness Video collection to meet the growing demand for simple, clear financial information.

The series contains six VHS videos on consumer financial topics that may be viewed at home.

The videos are available free of charge to any member of the credit union.

Here's how it works: Six videos are now available at Halton Credit Union. Arrangements to borrow a video may be made through any of the credit union's six locations. These videos cover the following topics: Preparing for retirement, basics of investment, credit, buying a home, insurance and savings. A series of guidebooks is provided with the videos.

Members of the credit union may borrow the videos and guidebooks free of charge simply by signing them out, just like signing books out of a library. Halton Credit Union welcomes people who are not now members to visit the credit union and discuss this and other services with a member service representative.

The videos were developed by Credit Union Financial Services, a marketing organization operated by the Canadian credit union system. With about half of all Canadian households now owning VCRs, CUFIS determined that this was one of the best ways to provide easily-accessible financial information to consumers.

"We are proud to introduce this new service to Halton area," said Peter Buwala, General Manager of Halton Credit Union. "Canadian credit unions have been first with many popular innovations in the financial services industry, and I believe this new video service will be very well received by consumers."

Halton Credit Union is a member-owned and controlled financial institution.
