

The 23rd Annual Crazy Boat Race sponsored by the Georgetown Lions Club brought out all kinds of entries. Organizers say 110 boats signed up to race down the Credit River Saturday.

Getting crazy on the Credit

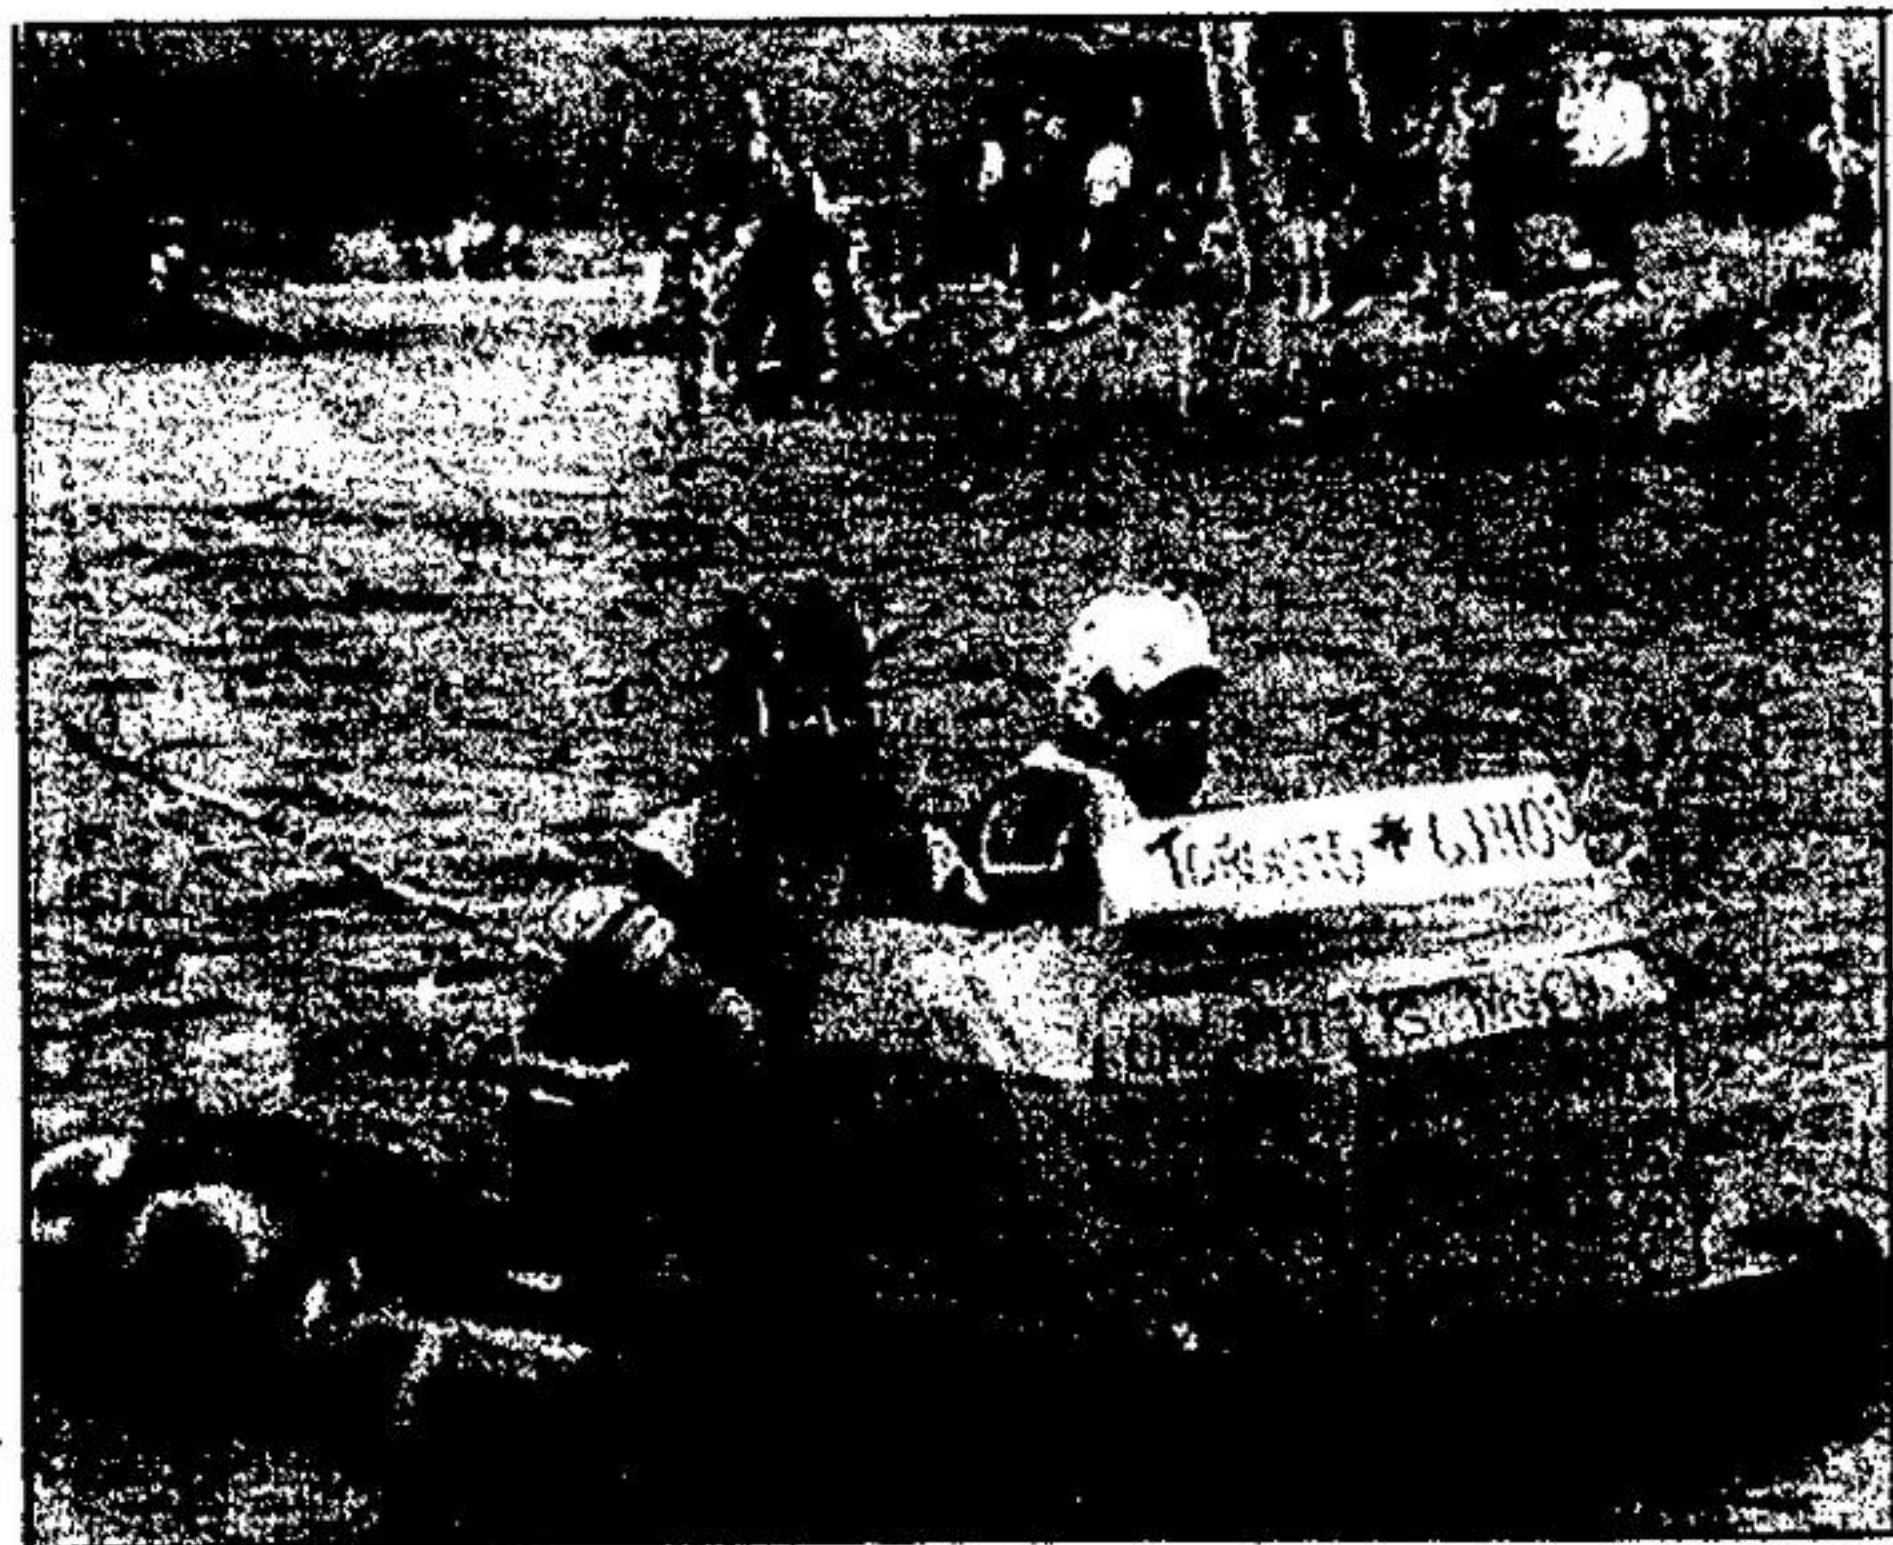

These four guys seem destined to make it to the finish line. The Crazy Boat Race attracted people from all over the north Halton, Caledon and Peel areas. Some boat entrants and fans drove in from the big city to catch a glimpse of the wet and wild annual event.

Elvis was alive and well at the Crazy Boat Race competition on the weekend. These crazy boat entrants serenaded the crowd with guitars.

that they used as paddles! The weather cooperated all day for organizers. It was a little chilly but bright and sunny.

Sure, they may put in as much effort as the Toronto Maple Leafs, but at least they stick it out until the end. This boat called "Toronto Who's" made it to the finish line at the Crazy Boat Race from Terra Cotta to Glen Williams Saturday. Too bad the Leafs couldn't do as well...

More photos on page 33

These crazy boat rafters sped toward the finish line at Saturday's race along the Credit River into Glen Williams. This year's race helped raise over $10,000 for multiple sclerosis.