CEMENT ACCOMMODATES LIVING FAMILY

Brick veneer topped with horizontal siding and shuttered windows adorn this three-bedroom, 1,328 square foot split level design. The weather protected entry opens to the landing which services the garage, back door and basement. Two handy coat closets are offered in the landing. Up the stairs is a large living room with masonry fireplace and dining room. The L-shaped kitchen, featuring abundant counter and shelf space, has ample room for a breakfast table. The three-piece main bathroom, with soaking tub, has direct access to the master bedroom.

The landing steps down to an unfinished lower level which offers 1,098 square feet for future development. Above grade windows allow plenty of natural light into this area. Potential for a family room, extra bedrooms or in-law suite can be accommodated. Rough-in plumbing for a bathroom and laundry facilities complete the lower level.

With the onset of "Secretaries Week" starting this coming Monday, I find myself smiling at the thoughts that cross my mind as I think through this column. There are so many things that most of us have to be thankful for, things that our secretaries do for us without thought or a pat on the back, and as I want to give them their utmost tribute this week, I think I will share with you one of my highlights over the past year.

Most of us in our office now carry the newest invention in paging equipment, called a "ALPHA-numeric pager." For those of you who don't know what this is, it is a little beeper that we carry around that tells us someone is looking for us, by transmitting a nasty little series of beeps. When we hit the button to turn off the noise, it also brings up a message on a tiny screen to tell us what the problem is or whom to call etc. This message is transmitted from a computer terminal in our office from our secretary. The screen is capable of carrying any type of message, and fairly long ones at that. Naturally, I don't have to tell you how invaluable this tool is. It tells us immediately if we must dive for a phone, or if it can wait until we finish lunch, or if we have to interrupt a client etc. Certainly, it is one of the finest inventions in our profession since the telephone!

Well, our secretaries have found a new way to help us through some of our more trying days! Now when they know that we are not feeling well, depressed, hassled or just need a few hugs, they page out a message to us to give us a smile. You probably know that secretaries know just about everything that goes on in our world, private and otherwise, so you can use your imagination about some of the messages we have printed up on our screens. Just to give you a laugh with me for today, some of my past messages have read: "Salesperson for sale cheap! Misses duty time - but never misses collecting a cheque." "Roses are red, violets are blue, just remember, your secretary can love even you." "Hope you're feeling better this morning. P.S. The boss is away!"

So, you see, even when things get tough, these girls find a way to try and cheer us up, make us feel better and put a little fun in our lives. Personally, I can't think of a more appropriate time to tell you that I am going to miss one of our fine secretaries, when she leaves us for Vancouver at the end of June. She has seen us through some pretty difficult times and has always been there, through it all, to help us. Somehow things will be different in July, but thank goodness we are not losing all of them at once! I think we have one of the finest teams of secretaries around, and credit should come not only this week, but all through the year.

Don't forget to hug your secretary this week - they deserve a lot of credit.
