UWC hosts symphony in Georgetown

On Sunday, June 4 at 8 p.m. at the John Elliott Theatre, 9 Church St., Georgetown, The University Women's Club of Georgetown will present a concert by The Oakville Symphony Orchestra with refreshments after in The Gallery.

The Oakville Symphony Orchestra is a talented group of community musicians dedicated to musical excellence. Over the past 20 years, what started as a small collection of local musicians has grown into a thriving organization, boasting more than 60 playing members. From Mozart and Bach, to contemporary Canadian pieces - some especially commissioned for the orchestra - the O.S.O. offers a spectrum of musical styles.

Their choice for the June 4 program is Mozart: Concerto for Two Pianos and Brahms: Symphony No. 2.

Tickets are $15 and can be purchased at Young's Pharmacy.

For further information, please call 877-7252, 877-5408, or 877-7137.

Appearing with the Oakville Symphony on June 4 in Georgetown will be the internationally-acclaimed duo pianists of Anagnoson and Kinton. Since their first performance together in 1975 Anagnoson and Kinton have gone on to delight audiences at home in Canada and abroad. Praised universally by audiences and critics alike, Anagnoson and Kinton possess four of the most formidable hands around. Their energetic performances, combined with a deep understanding of the repertoire, have prompted some communities to invite them back three years in a row.

When appropriate, they talk about their music, giving thematic demonstrations that add immeasurably to the audience's enjoyment of the performance.

In addition to their frequent broadcasts on the CBC, they have been heard on the BBC, Hilversum Radio (The Netherlands), and Radio Suisse Romande.

These pioneering musicians have commissioned new works, and reintroduced the original two piano versions of Stravinsky's Dumbarton Oaks, and Bartok's Miraculous Mandarin in the composer's own arrangements (both North American premieres).
