DICK KLEINER

Who played the 'Bionic Woman'?

Q. My sister and I have a bet concerning who played the "Bionic Woman" — was it Farrah Fawcett or Lindsay Wagner? — E.M. and K.M., Kalamazoo, Mich.

A. Lindsay Wagner was "Bionic." Farrah Fawcett was merely angelic.

Q. I am 12 years old and a big Arnold Schwarzenegger fan. In "Red Heat" he played a Russian, in "Commando" he played an East German and in "Twins" he is from some far-off island. What country is he really from? J.C., Portage, Mich.

A. Arnold Schwarzenegger was born (on July 30, 1947) in Graz, Austria. He came to the United States in 1967 after gaining fame in Europe as a bodybuilder. He became a U.S. citizen in 1983.

Q. Is John Wayne really Patrick Swayze's father? — J., St. Joseph, Mo.

A. No. The Duke had a son named Patrick, but he is Patrick Wayne — not Patrick Swayze.

Q. Can you help me find my only "claim to fame"? "The George Raft Story," starring Ray Danton, was filmed in the early '60s. I had a very small part in it and I'd like to get the video to show my kids that their mom isn't such a stick-in-the-mud after all. Is it available? — C.D., Westford, Mass.

A. No, it's not. You'll just have to show them some other way, like ski jumping or alligator wrestling.

Q. Is that really Jimmy Stewart talking to his granddaughter on the commercial for Campbell's Home Cookin' soup? — T.L., Gables, Mich.

A. Yes, Jimmy did that — for a whopping fee.

Q. Was there ever a movie made of "The Snow Queen"? I seem to remember seeing it, but nobody else remembers it. Am I Looney Tunes, or did I see it? — B.K.M., Connersville, Ind.

A. You are entirely non-Looney Tunes. "The Snow Queen" was released in 1959. It was an animated film, with Sandra Dee supplying the voice of the fast-frozen queen.

A. I have been told that Roy Rogers died. Is that true? Also, was Joey Bishop formerly a Catholic priest? — L.D., Little Rock, Ark.

A. Roy Rogers is still living. In fact, he made a brief appearance with his wife, Dale Evans, on this year's Academy Awards program. Joey Bishop, whose real name was Joseph Gottlieb, was never a priest.

Cinematic gem documents Calgary Winter Olympics

Long awaited "Share the Flame" due out

A new cinematic gem crafted by Bud Greenspan will be unveiled in late May.

Greenspan, an award-winning film-maker, has produced a plethora of riveting films about athletes' attempts to win Olympic gold.

Share The Flame: Calgary '88 is his richly textured account of the first Winter Olympics held in Canada.

The two-part "official film" of the XV Olympic Winter Games will air May 28 and 29 on CTV.

Greenspan's Olympic films are not just a series of film clips showing athletes winning medals. He follows a number of athletes - from various countries - through the Games. Greenspan focuses on individual competitors as people, not just athletes, and takes viewers on the same emotional rollercoaster Olympians embark on.

Some of these athletes claim gold; others do not make it to the medal podium, but that does not make them losers.

To A Safer Place, the story of how an incest victim overcame years of sexual abuse, will be televised June 6 by CBC-TV.

The film, said a CBC spokesman, challenges the silence that society has maintained about incest. "It invites discussion about the experience and encourages survivors to break through that silence to recover a sense of self-worth and dignity."

To A Safer Place was produced by the National Film Board.

Scandal, a feature film based on the Profumo Affair - a political/sex scandal that rocked Britain 25 years ago - opens at selected Canadian theatres on May 19.

The film explores the tangle of personal relationships that toppled Britain's Tory government in 1964.

John Profumo, Britain's Minister for War, was involved with a call girl named Christine Keeler - who was also providing certain favors to Soviet naval attaché Eugene Ivanov. Another key player was Dr. Stephen Ward, who challenged England's rigid class system by introducing Keeler and her companion, Mandy Rice-Davies, to Profumo's elevated social circles.

There was a joke making the rounds in Canada a quarter-century ago, after the scandal became daily front-page news. The cleanest version went something like this: Who is the worst carpenter in the world? Christine Keeler. After she packed up her tools, the cabinet collapsed.

Santa Claus makes an appearance in the Soviet Union this year - with the help of a Canadian TV network.

Global TV, the TVA network (French language) and Russian broadcasters are all covering Toronto's Santa Claus parade on Nov. 19. Global, the host broadcaster, is supplying technical facilities and crews. The Soviets are sending their own commentators.

The Russian edition will be broadcast in the Soviet Union during the last week in December to celebrate the arrival of Father Frost - sort of a Russian equivalent to Santa Claus.
