Local squash player gets national fame

Melanie Jans, 15, is a heroine of the local squash circuit with international recognition to boot.

The Georgetown District High School student battled in a squash competition in Ottawa last weekend that put her on the top of the heap. She defeated competitors from Manitoba and Edmonton in three games, winning each 3-0.

Although Melanie shines in her under-16 division and plans to try out for the seniors team "when I'm old enough," she won't make the game of squash her life.

"I don't wish to pursue it as a career," she said.

The student and squash player also joins a team of players at Georgetown high school. One of the team's challenges is the Jahinger Khan High School Squash Cup that attracts "people from all over the province."

There are five members from each high school who play for the cup, said Melanie.

In August, Melanie will travel to New Zealand where she will compete in an international squash championship, called the Junior Ladies World Squash Championship, which runs from Aug. 20 to Sept. 13.

Melanie and the other players who spent the weekend in Ottawa received special training from a sports psychologist. For the next while, she plans to take things easy, and plans to keep practising for this summer's championship overseas.
