Halton Hills lags behind in recycling efforts

Halton Hills residents lag behind other Halton municipalities in recycling, according to Regional survey results released this month.

In a report to Regional councillors last week, Environics Research Group Limited data indicated that 80 per cent of Halton Hills residents surveyed said they participated in a recycling program.

This compares to Burlington, where 93 per cent participate, Oakville where 87 per cent participate and Milton where 83 per cent of residents are active in a recycling program.

The survey results were based on the interview of 602 residents. The survey was weighted to represent each municipality.

Halton residents are aware of how waste is being managed by the Region, but they tended to "overestimate the role played by recycling, landfill and incineration," said the report.

Almost 70 per cent of those surveyed said they knew the Region was looking for an option to landfill.

People interviewed said they would consider the wet-dry option of recycling, where "wet" waste such as food scraps is separated from "dry" waste, such as packaging. Wet waste would be used for composting. One-third of those surveyed said they would "likely" consider this program if offered by Halton Region, bringing the total up to 80-per-cent support for the wet-dry program.

Six of 10 residents surveyed in Halton Region expressed concern about having an incinerator located somewhere in their community. More Halton Hills residents were concerned about increased truck traffic, health effects, odors, and loss of property value than in the three other municipalities.

All municipalities expressed concern for air pollution danger increased by an incinerator.

But 82 per cent of the Halton people surveyed said they would not stop recycling if incineration was available.

Halton Hills residents surveyed led the percentage in asking for general information. Those in Oakville and Milton were concerned about where facilities would be located. Milton residents also requested environmental and health information about waste management.

The Regional survey report says

Only 10 days to go

GDHS Report

by MICHELLE ROUILLARD

I don't mean to keep harping on the subject, but, there are only 10 days of school left... do you know where your exams are? Each year, we, the students, are given a photocopy of the exam schedule. The reason we are given it at mid-term is because it takes us two months just to decipher the thing. Am I right, or am I right? Why do they have to have "course codes" i.e. ENG 4A1, why can't they just say Grade 12 advanced English? Too many letters I guess.

Well, we have a new student council president now, eh? Welcome Jill Windsor! Not only do we have a president that has experience in the school politics, from being on student council for three years straight, but we also have a president that doesn't have a Dan Quale clone for vice-pres.

Nope. Hello to Gary Robinson. Hey, I used to live on the same street as him! What a history we have! Don't forget to check out the story on Page 5.

On Thursday, majority of the student body went out and worked their bodies by participating in a two-kilometre walk. This was because of the Participation Challenge with Guelph. So, 1,500 students walked, ran, crawled or were dragged through the course in "only" 45 minutes. Is that a record or something?

There are a few students in our midst who are a part of the opening ceremonies at SkyDome. They've been putting in numerous hours of rehearsal and will be more than a little upset if the opening is cancelled on Saturday.

That's it for me! See ya next week.

rural residents and those from small towns were also concerned about where a waste site would be located.

Although Halton residents have "an ongoing interest in the Region's waste management" they are asking for general information and not specifics, says the Regional survey.
