

Seniors starting a membership drive

The Georgetown and District Senior's Association is now engaged in a membership drive. However, since the association has nothing to offer its members yet except information, dreams and a chance to work toward realization of those dreams, membership is a statement that you, a senior 55 years or over are in support of the association's aim to build a seniors recreation centre. The association is not asking a fee for membership; it is requesting a donation of whatever you choose to give and a tax receipt will be provided before the end of the year. All money from these donations will go towards the cost of this project.

It is felt by the association board that while a lot of money will have to be raised within the general public by various fund raising events, it should first of all be seen by everyone that seniors in Georgetown want this recreation centre and are willing to be first to contribute towards it. Between now and the end of September every effort will be made to contact all seniors to offer them membership of the association. Immediately, announcements are to be made in all local churches and information brochures and membership applications will be available there for seniors to use. The association will be attending public functions such as Pioneer Days and the fall fair. Look out for board and committee members at these events.

Direct contact will shortly be made with all seniors who have already expressed their support. Finally a door to door canvas will be made in September of all those remaining on our list who have not yet been contacted. There will still be some remaining who the association is not yet aware of.

If you are one of these or if you wish to get in touch with the association now please call John White, Membership Committee Chairman at 877-9160 or Mabel Mellish, Board Secretary at 877-7149.

Resume helps make that good impression

By PATRICIA D'SOUZA and JENNIFER LUSBY
Herald Special

Regardless of whether or not you've had a job, a resume is a functional and very useful tool in your job search. A personal resume gives an employer a good indication of how well you might fit into the organization.

Resumes should be kept short and factual. Your achievements and strong points should be emphasized. The following facts should be included:

- name, address, phone number;
- education: All schools you have attended should be listed starting with the most recent and give the dates when you finished. It's a good idea to mention your marks if they are above average. Include any awards or scholarships you have won. Also list any school activities such as sports, clubs, or teams you have been involved with. Team membership and involvement in extra curricular activities can sometimes work more to your advantage than high marks;
- work experience: Starting with the most recent, list all the jobs you have held and the dates you worked for each (volunteer and paid). Give a brief description of your duties and responsibilities. Any raises or promotions can be mentioned.

If you have never held a job before, list all the work you have done for other people (including volunteer) no matter how insignificant it may seem;

-interests: An employer can gain an insight into a person's character based on that person's interests and pastimes. List any clubs or organizations that you belong to and also mention your hobbies and spare time activities;

-goals: If you have any long-range goals state them because even if there isn't any work available, you have at least shown the employer that you are ambitious and determined;

-references: It's a good idea to list three references. The best references are teachers and past employers. Relatives should never be mentioned no matter who they are. Remember to ask for permission to use people as references before you make up your resume.

Try recycling phone books

Telephone books could come back by popular demand.

Halton Regional councillors referred Wednesday to a City of Guelph proposed project to recycle telephone books as a way to save paper.

Burlington Coun. Barry Quinn said Halton should support Guelph's proposal and should send a letter to Bell Canada Enterprises Inc. asking the corporation to recycle their telephone pages.

Guelph city council voted on the recycled phone book proposal at an April 17 meeting.

Dig it

The Town recently purchased a Crimson King Maple as part of its recognition of Environment Week which was all this past week. Left to right are Regional Councillor Marilyn Serjeantson, the town's Tuesday morning manager of operations Ted Drewlo, Mayor Russ Miller, town Councillor Rob Heaton, administrative clerk Dan Costea, and Councillor Norm Elliott, taking a keen interest in ensuring the young maple is planted correctly in front of the new Civic Centre. This tree is only one of several trees and plants used to beautify the Civic Centre's grounds. (Herald photo)

Town reviewing zoning rules for Nor Halton

There will be no news on the Nor-Halton Park proposal to open a year-round trailer park for 30 Willow Park residents until the Town of Halton Hills reviews "a variety of items" to allow a zoning change.

The town said Monday that taxation, water supply and septic service must be reviewed before Merv and Doris Barber, who own a seasonal trailer facility on Regional Road 12, will be approved for a trailer park.

Willow Park on Highway 7 in Norval will be closed by the Credit Valley Conservation Authority in November. The trailer owners live in a flood plain of the Credit River and have already been given two extensions to remain on the CVCA-protected property.

Residents surrounding the proposed year-round trailer park, southwest of Acton, say they fear the water supply will be drained by the addition of 30 trailer homes and that vandalism and garbage could become problems if the site is approved.

Residents in support of and opposed to the Nor-Halton proposal jammed the town council chambers for a public meeting May 23.

Town council will vote on deferring a staff decision on the proposed trailer park at next Monday's council meeting.
