Abortion is not a right

Dear Sir,

Some women's groups which are active in the abortion controversy are asking for the "right to reproductive choice." Many succumb to their reasoning that they are for the freedom of every woman to choose for herself. In reality, they are asking for a second chance to take a decision, when they blew the first one. They had their first chance (unless they were raped) when they engaged in sex.

Many today want the licence to get into drugs, marriage and free sex without bearing the consequences. Health care, divorce and abortion become the solutions to their problems. who pays is society, the children and the unborn. When they do get a second chance, they often repeat the same mistake. Too many children of second and third marriages grow up with only one parent. Too many lives are destroyed by second and third abortions.

What next? Grant the right to choose after conception, and some will want a third chance: the right to choose after birth. What if the child is born with some defect? It would be an unwanted child! What if the child cries too much and the parents cannot enjoy their deserved rest? It would infringe on their rights of "security of the person!" What if the parents separate? The child would have no more means of support! The same arguments can be carried over again. Unfortunately, I am not just being fictitious. In France a law was proposed last year, asking for the right to "abort" the child until the third day after birth!

We do not get a second chance on any of the important decisions in life, without paying for our mistakes. The best "right" is the one which we create for ourselves by making the right decision, the first time.
