TRIVIA

Energy Savers

A microwave oven uses a third of the electrical energy required by a conventional electric oven.
 A color television on 8 hours a day for a month uses 48 kilowatts. The same-sized black and white set uses 13 kwhs.

Thinking Computer

At Los Alamos National Laboratory, Ihor Bohachevsky, V.K. Viswanathan and T.P. Cotter are developing a computer code that will think, allowing them to produce a nearly perfect lens every time.

The experimenters say if they put in enough information about the lens they want to design, the computer will be able to move from one bit of information to the next, determining the best move at each step and designing the lens bit by bit.

What we're doing is making use of the speed and memory of the computer to do something a human could not do with pencil and paper if he worked at it all of his life.

Taxed to death

calamity might mean some extra time off for golf. Or was it in response to recalcitrant taxpayers who harbored the delusion that they might somehow be able to out-wait the taxman.

"Dear Mr. Smith: We have received your polite letter advising us that you will pay your back-taxes when Doomsday comes. We have placed this letter on file, and will expect payment the following morning."

All in all, it says something interesting about the priorities of those who are charged with collecting government revenues. And it certainly adds a new wrinkle to the Doomsday scenario we've seen in so many science-fiction movies.

Imagine, if you will, emerging from your basement bomb-shelter. All is desolate, and silent.

And then, out of nowhere, a man in a dark suit with a briefcase comes hurrying down the remains of your front street, waving his hand and calling cheerfully:

"Mr. Smith! Mr. Smith - guess what... We've just disallowed two-thirds of your deductions!"

It's nice to have something to look forward to.
