This is a site most people, including the councillors won't see any more. This small entrance led people downstairs to a tiny council chambers in the old administration building on Trafalgar Road. The building was the old Township of Esquesing administration centre.

Congratulations!

The employees of P.G. Bell are pleased to have participated in the manufacture and installation of the architectural porcelain cladding for the new Halton Hills Civic Centre.
