

Quick beauty pointers for the beautiful bride-to-be

Marriage is forever and, with luck, your wedding photos will last that long, too. To make sure you look great on your big day, and ever after in all the pictures, follow these helpful hints.

Start with your hair

Taking it from the top, you'll want your hair to look just right. Perming before the wedding offers many benefits: Hair becomes easy to care for, the look will last, and your curls won't fall or fade by the end of the long day.

Also, a permanent often adds body and versatility to your hairstyle. However, you may fear perming because it can be difficult to control the amount of curl.

The Gillette Company has developed the perfect solution. The new Epic Waves™ collection of home permanents by Toni® can give any bride the look she wants without the danger of having a poodle-tight curl on her wedding day.

If you select any of the three Epic Waves™ perms, the Try-On Perm™, the Anytime Perm™ or the Adaptable Perm™, you can forget all about your worst perm fears.

Unique feature

To truly control the amount of curl in your perm, you may want to try the Adaptable Perm™.

It offers the unique feature of allowing you to apply the finishing rinse at any time during the next two days, to "lock-in" desired curls, waves or body. Your perm will be gorgeous for up to eight weeks.

Be sure, of course, to choose a hairstyle that flatters your face.

This spring, brides are sweeping hair up into buns, chignons or French twists. Braids entwined with ribbon are also very attractive for spring weddings. Use a light-holding hairspray to keep your hair perfect all day.

Easy tips

To complement that perfect perm, here are some quick and easy tips for beautiful makeup that will look natural and last all day:

- Layer your foundation and blush. Apply a liquid base coat, smooth evenly over face, then pat gently with a matching powder foundation.

- After foundation, lightly apply blush. Use sweeping strokes from temple to cheekbone, so hot photography lights will not make you look pale.

- Use eye shadow sparingly, especially for a daytime ceremony.

- Shades of gray, brown and navy can look dramatic and very flattering if applied correctly.

- Use a lipstick that is not too bold—one that complements your blush color.

- Brush mascara onto only the outermost edges of your lashes.

- If, during the walk down the aisle, you become tearful, your mascara won't ruin your look.

With these helpful hints, you'll look perfect all day, and have perfect pictures!

A PERFECT BEAUTY—Looking lovely and in love on her happy day, this bride has created a beautiful hair-style with The Gillette Company's new Epic Waves™ Adaptable Perm™. Her hair-style will last throughout her wedding day, and for eight glorious newlywed weeks!

Wedding day beauty: Tips to help the bride to look her radiant best

As you dress on your wedding day, perhaps you'll be surrounded by a flock of attendants. Or, perhaps your mother and a single close friend will be with you.

Whatever the case, this distinctly feminine ritual will be among your most precious memories of the entire day.

However slapdash your usual routine, this is a day when everything must be perfect. Taking the time to fuss over your hair, your skin and your makeup will produce enthralling results.

Wowing that man waiting for you at the end of the aisle, the one who's seen you at your worst and still loves you, makes it the most fun.

Things to remember

If you're not getting ready at home, make a list the day before the wedding of what you'll need with you. Don't forget extras like cotton swabs and cottonballs for makeup mishaps and touchups.

As you pack your bags, run through the list with one of your attendants, checking off each item. Being secure in the knowledge that you haven't left any essentials behind will relieve some of the pre-wedding jitters you're sure to have.

Your makeup for your wedding day should be delicate and light, recommends Suzanne Gould Maggin, fashion editor of Modern Bride magazine.

When choosing eye and cheek color, Princess Marcella Borghese's new Shadow and Blush Milano collection offers something special for a special day.

"Gems of Italy" are faceted chunks of color available in a palette as radiant as a bride-to-be. The Shadow Milano trio "Opalinos" is subtle and soft-spoken.

Like the opal itself, each "gem" is a combination of luminous white powder and striking highlights in pink, green and blue. Says Maggin, "The effect is perfect with the opalescence in many of today's dresses."

Also in the spirit of the day are the three alluring shades of pink that comprise "Innocente," cyccolor as flattering as its name. Silken-textured and crease-resistant, the shadows perform beautifully.

The camera's eye will follow you faithfully on your wedding day. Even though you may tire of being in the spotlight, your makeup shouldn't.

Blush Milano comes in an array of fifteen moisturizing, long-wearing colors. Muted hues of pink in "Peonia" and "Rosetto" flatter an ivory complexion, while the dusky peach tones in "Pesca" suit olive-tone skins.

The sculpted powders brush on softly, bringing the gentlest of blushes to the cheek.

Of utmost importance, stresses Maggin, is a dusting of translucent powder over all to set the look and tone down shine, essential for photography.

When your makeup is done, you are ready to slip into your dress. Depending on your gown, you may either step into it, having already placed the slip within, or else draw the gown over your head.

For the latter, suggests Maggin, have a friend help you. She should form a tunnel with the dress, bringing it down over your head as you shimmy in from below.

This process will keep you from spoiling your makeup, or soiling the dress.

The bride should be pampered!

Indulging yourself on your wedding day is the privilege of the bride, from the gown you'll wear once, to the very time you spend getting ready.

Revel in those elements that separate your wedding day from all others, and you will be a truly beautiful bride.

Romantic folklore

Superstition and folklore have long been associated with love and romance. In ancient times, charms, magic potions and other supernatural or magical forces frequently were employed as a way of trying to control one's destiny—especially in matters of the heart.

Love Potions: A Book of Charms and Omens (Salem House Publishers), written by Josephine Addison and illustrated by Diana Winkfield, relays to the reader a variety of ancient love potions, incantations and beliefs in a way that is at once whimsical and informative.
