

Remembering Shawn

Friends of Shawn McNeil gathered at the intersection of Guelph Street and Maple Avenue between 11:30 p.m. and 12:30 a.m. for a candle-light vigil Sunday night. Shawn, 17, was struck and killed by a car at the intersection at this time last year. The youths

CAS needs volunteers for Mother's Morning Out program

The Halton Children's Aid Society needs volunteers for its "Mother Morning Out" program, that is run out of the Knox Presbyterian Church in Georgetown, the program's co-ordinator, Susan Stuart, says.

Ms. Stuart says the eight-year-old program gives mothers, especially those who feel isolated and might have trouble meeting other mothers, a chance to socialize and make friends while their children also get the opportunity to play with other children. It's free and is held every Thursday from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. The society will provide transportation for those who need it. Although there are enough volunteers to run the mother part of the program, four more volunteers are needed to help out with children, said Ms. Stuart.

There are currently four volunteers for the children program, meaning there is one volunteer for four to five children. Ms. Stuart says four more volunteers are needed so the ratio is reduced to 1 to 3.

She stresses the volunteers will be doing more than just babysitting. They are expected to work together to come with a range of activities which is sometimes a challenge because the children's age range from infants to five-year-olds.

Ms. Stuart says mothers get the chance to be involved in a range of activities including listening to speakers, participating in outings, and viewing films. The mothers recently heard the public health nurse talk about health issues related to themselves and their children. A clothing swap is one of the upcoming events, she said.

Ms. Stuart urges mothers to participate in the group. Ms. Stuart can be contacted at 878-2375.

Return parking survey

The Hamilton consultant firm Parker Consultants is asking Georgetown residents who received a parking questionnaire earlier this month to send it in as soon as possible. A spokesman for the firm, which is conducting a downtown parking survey for town council, said more questionnaires mean better survey results.
