Knights and Petes dominate coaches poll

Members of the London Knights and Peterborough Petes dominated the 1989-90 OHL Coaches Poll in their respective divisions by capturing six and five of 18 categories respectively. Individually, star centres Paul DiPietro of the Sudbury Wolves and Mike Ricci of the Petes led all players with DiPietro winning three categories, finishing second in two others and third in a sixth category while Ricci won two categories and finished tied for first in two others.

DiPietro was named the Emms Division's most dangerous player in the goal area, best stickhandler and also the best shot while finishing second as best skater and fastest skater and third in best on face-offs. Ricci was the Leyden Division's best playmaker and most dangerous in the goal area and finished tied for first with Cornwall's Owen Nolan for the best shot and with Belleville's Scott Thornton for best on face-offs.

Other winners from the Petes were left winger Dave Lorentz who repeated from last year's poll as the best penalty killer and was also named the best defensive forward this year and defenceman Jamie Pegg who took the most underrated player honors, edging out Belleville Bulls defenceman Derek Morin by one point, 17-16. Finishing a close third with 14 points was Kingston Frontenacs right winger Bob McKillop. Peterborough's Ricci also tied for the lead in two other categories, giving them firsts in a total of seven categories.

Among the London players who took the top honors in the Emms poll were right winger Steve Martell who was named the most underrated player and the hardest worker and centre Chris Taylor who was the most improved player and was also third as the most dangerous in the goal area. Rick Corriveau was named best offensive defenceman and finished second in three other categories - smartest player, best shot and hardest shot while teammate Trevor Dam was named the best penalty killer in addition to finishing second as the best checker and best defensive forward. The Knights also had the best defensive defenceman winner in three-year veteran Paul Holden.

Each division again conducted separate polls due to the unbalanced nature of the regular schedule. Coaches were not allowed to vote for their own players as points were awarded on a five-three-one point system for a first-second-third selection.

The other 12 category winners in the Emms poll came from four teams - Kitchener Rangers with four, Owen Sound Platers and Sudbury with three each and Niagara Falls Thunder with one plus one tied category - best playmaker between Niagara Falls and Sudbury.

Two players - Kitchener left winger Randy Pearce and Owen Sound centre Grayden Reid - led two categories each. Pearce was named the best checker and best defensive forward and Reid was the best skater and fastest skater. Thunder centre Keith Primeau was also tops in two categories - as the best on face-offs and tied for the lead with Sudbury's Darcy Cahill as the best playmaker.

Primeau also was second in the best stickhandler and most dangerous in goal area categories.

Rounding out the Emms poll were centre Jason Firth as the smartest player and right winger Steve Rice as the best body checker, both of Kitchener and Owen Sound defenceman Mike Speer with the hardest shot.

The Knights' Taylor was the only unanimous selection, receiving 35 points in the voting as the most improved player. Second in points was Holden with 33 followed by Kitchener's Rice at 31 and Pearce at 30. There were no repeat winners in the Emms Division.

Five teams shared the remaining categories in the Leyden poll led by the Cornwall Royals who had right winger Owen Nolan appearing in five categories and defenceman John Slaney in three. Nolan was the best body checker and tied with Ricci as the best playmaker. He also finished second as most dangerous in the goal area and was third as best skater and fastest skater while Slaney was voted the smartest player and the best offensive defenceman and was second as the best stickhandler.
