These two Georgetown and District High School students were just a couple of students-cum-models who helped raise money for the Georgetown cancer society held last Wednesday at the high school. The fashion show entitled "The Spring Formal Fashion Show" was organized by Grade 11 high school student Leigh Whiting. The total amount raised was unavailable at press time. (Herald Photo)

Acton parents group opposes housing at old stone school

The Acton group Parents Assisting Children and Teachers (P.A.C.T.) urged town council last Monday night to oppose a proposal to use the stone school in Acton as part of a housing development.

In a letter addressed to council the group, which consists of parents whose children attend Robert Little school, listed several objections to the proposal including the destruction of a "beautiful park-like setting," and a potential source of danger to their children.

The town's administrator clerk, Dan Costea, told council the town is waiting for the Halton Non-Profit Housing Corporation to say how it would like to develop the site. The town can't act until it knows the proposal Mr. Costea said.

Council members decided not to comment until their general committee meeting April 23. The town expects to receive the housing corporation development proposal by this date. But as of press time Mr. Costea hadn't received any proposal. Council will eventually have to decide whether to sell the school and adjoining property to the housing corporation, said Mr. Costea.

The letter's author, LeAnne Taylor, said the Stone school area and the adjoining property off of River Street, is used by many residents for walking and picnicking in the summer and tobogganing in the winter. A housing development would ruin park-like characteristics, said Ms. Taylor.

P.A.C.T. also argued that any run-off from the housing project would end up in the most polluted area of Fairy Lake, making clean up of the lake that much more difficult.

Ms. Taylor also told councillors increased traffic from the housing project would endanger Robert Little Public School students.

Robert Little students travelling to and from school by bus enter and leave the bus on River Street, the proposed entrance for the housing development, Ms. Taylor warned councillors.

Other problems outlined in the letter include a lack of parking space for Robert Little teachers and the new residents and potential conflicts between residents and the school over such things as playground equipment and noise created by the children during their recess time.

Ms. Taylor argues children living in the development would use the school's playground equipment and noise generated by the students would bother some residents, especially the elderly and shift workers living in the development.

Man falls at Rattlesnake Point, Milton

An 18-year-old man broke his neck, received severe internal injuries and head injuries when he lost his footing and fell 45 feet at Rattlesnake Park in Milton at 7:45 p.m. April 14, Halton Regional Police say.

The Burlington man was standing on a ledge at the park when he lost his footing and fell.

It took approximately an hour for fire, police and ambulance personnel to rescue the man.

He was rushed to Milton District Hospital and then airlifted to Hamilton General Hospital.

The man was hiking with five friends, between the ages of 18 and 20, when the incident occurred, police say.

He was listed as unconscious and in serious condition at press time.
