Eastwood co-star died in accident

ASK DICK KLEINER

DICK KLEINER

Q. There was a TV show a few years ago called "Rawhide." What was the tall guy's name? I've heard since that he was drowned in a canoe accident. But I cannot think of his name. — A.M.S., Atlantic, Iowa.

A. There were two tall guys on that show — surely you remember Clint Eastwood, as Rowdy Yates. The other was Eric Fleming, as Gil Favor. He did drown, while shooting a movie in South America.

Q. Could you tell me and my family why they have such horrible, discordant theme music on the TV show "Jeopardy"? We like the show, but not enough to listen to the discord that accompanies it. Rubbing chalk the wrong way on a blackboard sounds good by comparison. — F.R., Joplin, Mo.

A. Funny — I've watched "Jeopardy" often and I never really noticed the music. You and your family must have hypersensitive ears.

Q. Hope you can print my letter so my kids can read it and know that their old mother is right, occasionally. The actor who plays Bill Spencer of "The Bold and the Beautiful" and the actor who plays Bob (Allie's hubby) on "Kate and Allie" are two different actors, right? — J.H., Goshen, Ind.

A. Right, old mother. Jim Storm plays Bill Spencer and Sam Freed is Bob.

Clint Eastwood Barry Newman

Q. My husband has been making fun of me, because I told him that I had seen a program called "Petrochely." I think the show aired in the '70s. I want to know if my memory serves me right. — K.J.R., Marshall, Ar.

A. It serves you right, although your spelling is a bit off. You have the pronunciation right, but it was actually spelled "Petrocelli," and it starred Barry Newman and Susan Howard and aired from '74 to '76.

Q. We recently saw a movie called "Blue Lightning," with Robert Culp and Sam Elliott. The paper said it was made in 1986, but it seems that I had first seen it long before then. My husband says I must have seen it in another life because he didn't remember it. When was it first shown? — E.B., Sutherlin, Or. A. This time, the husband is right. That was a TV movie which first aired on CBS on May 7, 1986.
