OUR LANGUAGE

by Jeffrey McQuain

VIAND ("VY-und") refers to an article of food or a delicious dish. End this noun with AND, and you won't misspell VIAND.
 A cesspool or pit that collects drainage is a SUMP. Don't let the spelling of this noun stump you: remove T from STUMP for SUMP.

Q. What's happened to TO and FROM? Isn't it wrong to say you're going "to there from here" instead of "from here to there"?

A. Putting TO before FROM isn't necessarily wrong, but it can be misleading. The normal order in English is to put FROM first, as in "from here to there." To use the preposition TO first is often confusing, especially with numbers: "They work to 5 from 9" is harder to grasp than "They work from 9 to 5," even though it's the same hours.

One that selects or chooses is a SELECTOR. Spell this noun correctly by choosing -OR to end SELECTOR.

BRUSHOFF refers to a rude or sudden dismissal. This slang noun is getting old and dusty, but you may want to brush off BRUSHOFF.

OUR LANGUAGE AD-VICE:
 There's definitely a point to this week's Ad-Vice Award. The winner — an advertisement for watching cable television "Anytime. All the time" — lacks a period after "time" in the second sentence fragment. If you must use fragments, at least remember the periods. Even better, though, is the habit of writing in complete sentences all the time — period.
