

Pity Mike Harris

aide labelled fruit, water and protein foods as "yuppy". (Media organizations are charged an average $150 per day per reporter to take advantage of the leaders' bus tours.)

And reporters trying to link up with the Harris tour have faced hurdles.

Twice in the first week, media relations persons Angele Dostaler said Harris would leave the next morning from Toronto.

Both times, when reporters in Toronto wanting to join the tour phoned back in the evening to confirm, that was changed with him leaving from Kingston and Ottawa. Last minute changes are expected in itineraries, but nothing of this magnitude.

Dostaler was also telling media that direct calls cannot be made to communications chairman Phil Gillies and campaign chairman John Laschinger - they must go through her.

Gillies, a former Brantford MPP, was aghast to hear this, promising to make his direct number available to the media once he gets a cellular phone this week.

Through it all, Harris is gamely trying to get his message across.

And to some extent, he's succeeding. Several times while mainstreeting in Toronto on the weekend people recognized him as the candidate who says he will freeze taxes.

Small business owners and farmers with stalls at a fruit market poured out their troubles into his sympathetic ears.

Harris also scored a major hit with residents of Marmora - who are protesting Metro Toronto plans to fill an old mine pit with garbage - when he called on the province to speed up and simplify the environmental assessment process.

And several people interviewed after he spoke to them said he "looks nice" and that they will vote for him.

But he has an uncanny knack of hitting the wrong note.

He told an unemployed man at Toronto's St. Lawrence Market, who had recently had a lung removed and also suffered a heart attack, to get back to work as soon as possible.

Another person he tried to charm at the market turned out to be Jane Cowan, sister-in-law of Paul Martin who ran for the federal Liberal leadership. Talk about bad luck.

And there are those who just plain don't like his message of health-care user fees and replacing rent controls with shelter subsidies.

Harris is not aware of the problems confronting him.

"You're right, (but) we are catching up," he said. "I said we would have to work very hard to get ready and we would have liked to have had more time."

"But I think we've had some success and we're going to have to continue with the message. I know that I'm not as well known but I've been very, very pleasantly surprised with the way I've been received."
