Seat belt month statistics staggering

Forty per cent of all traffic tickets handed out in October by Halton Region Police were seat belt violations, Sergeant Carey Smith reported. He called the figure "disconcerting" because of a massive campaign by police across the province to promote seat belt safety during that month.

In comparison, seat belt offences averaged about 22 per cent of all Highway Traffic Act violations during August and September, Mr. Smith said.

The safety campaign included going into schools with a program designed especially for children. Yet a record 1,500 seat belt violation tickets were issued by the Halton Region Police.

"If there's one easy way of cutting down on the annual carnage on our roads, it is through the use of seat belts and through the enforcement of seat belt legislation," said Inspector Bryan Graham, head of traffic services for the Peel Region force.
