A Picture to Color

Our government makes use of law-enforcement officers to help and protect the public. This officer is helping the lost child find his way home.

A Little Bit of HUMOR

Teacher: What's an octopus?
Little Susie: It's an eight-sided cat.

Teacher: Where was the Declaration of Independence signed?
Tom: At the bottom.

Mother: Clarence, you look filthy! Have you been playing in the dirt?
Clarence: No, Mom, I've been collecting soil samples.

Q: What do you lose every time you stand up?
A: Your lap.

Bob: You'd think people would want to stop voting.
Rob: What makes you say that?
Bob: Well, Dad says that in any election it doesn't matter who wins, it's still gonna' cost him.

History teacher: Where did George Washington cross the Delaware River?
Student: At the bottom of page 169.

Citizens of all ages should have an understanding of how their government functions. Without this knowledge, it's impossible to improve the system.
