What would you do if you ruled the world?

Marcy Hallett, Grade 5, Park Public School: "I would make peace on earth. I would get rid of the war makers, the tanks and nuclear bombs."

Jeff Boyce, Grade 1, Park Public School: "I would protect the animals."

Michelle Wiener, Grade 3, Park Public School: "I would clean up the world and stop pollution. I'd make everyone compost and recycle."

How long does it take to travel the world?

- If the earth were completely dry, with no oceans separating the continents, you could walk around our planet, traveling by day and night, in less than a year.
- If you were a tidal wave, you could cross the earth in 60 hours.
- If you were a Boeing 747 jet and could fly non-stop around the earth, your trip would take around 44 hours.
- If you were a speeding bullet, shot with enough force, you would make the trip in 14 hours.
- If you were a beam of light, then your trip would take only a tenth of a second!

The mystery of Easter Island

Easter Island, a volcanic island in the South Pacific, is the site of a great mystery. More than 600 enormous stone heads, 2,000 years old, each carved from a solid piece of rock and with identical faces, stand on the island.

why work was stopped suddenly and why it was never continued.

Nobody knows how the island's inhabitants moved the heavy stones from the stone quarry 10 miles away, or what the figures represented.

The face of mystery

They rise from 10 to 40 feet above the surface and weigh up to 70 tons each. None of these heads has eyes and none is complete. Ancient people who lived on the island left tools scattered around the partly finished figures, but archaeologists have no explanation

Ancient wars

Island legends tell of wars in 400 A.D. between the original inhabitants who came from Peru and invaders from other South Sea islands. The natives who built the statues were called long ears, and the invaders were called the short ears!
