

Trees for CUSO

It's almost time to spruce up the backyard again, and CUSO is offering you a novel way to do so. Buy a small Colorado Blue Spruce for $5 (or five trees for $20), and you can beautify your garden as well as contributing to Third World reforestation.

The three-year-old trees, eight to 12 inches high, will be on sale Saturday, May 4 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Canadian Tire lot near the garden centre in Georgetown.

Each comes bagged in peat moss and complete with planting instructions and information on CUSO sustainable development projects.

An environmentally-aware Kingston couple - Al and Mary Sue Rankin - are working in partnership with CUSO on the project, titled Sprucing up the Globe. Last year, the Rankins raised thousands of dollars for two CUSO reforestation projects in Central America and Africa.

They bought 22,000 seedlings at their own expense from a private supplier and spent their weekends travelling to several large Ontario cities to sell seedlings in parking lots and shopping malls. Mary Sue, an artist, took one day off each week to do promotional and publicity work while Al, a secondary school teacher, joined her on sales days.

The project proved so successful that the Rankins are repeating it this year. In fact, they are expanding it - to the Ottawa valley and 11 southern Ontario cities.

"Last year there was strong interest and support given by church groups in many of the towns and cities we visited, so this year we are involving the churches more directly," says Mary Sue. "Some will be selling trees for us. They can receive a percentage of sales for church projects or donate all the funds to CUSO projects."

Stencil art session
