Wedding coordinators introduced by Georgetown Hallmark store

Neil and Mary Lou Young and Debbie Kilmer are pleased to announce the appointments of Mary Bond, Dee Dee Haynes and Lisa Hitchcock as wedding coordinators at Hallmark Greetings and Gifts, in Georgetown.

These three ladies are responsible for providing a free wedding consultation for couples preparing for marriage.

Aside from the traditional wedding products, including invitations, napkins, matches and thank-you notes, Hallmark Greetings and Gifts provides their brides with a four-page, specially-designed checklist with all the services that are offered to the bride and groom.

The wide selection of wedding invitations that are available from International Artercrafts, Trans Canada, and also from Hallmark are accentuated with a wide selection of wedding albums, guest books, ring bearer pillows, garters and much more.

The free, personalized service is designed to be flexible and to meet the needs of future brides and grooms. For 48 hours, the couple can borrow either invitation catalogue to choose which styles best suit them in the privacy of their own home.

After this, time can be made with one of the wedding consultants. The couple can arrange for a visit in the store or the consultant can travel to the bride's or groom's home for a visit, or if necessary, a combination of visits can be arranged.

Daytime coordinator, Mary Bond, is an energetic individual who performs the proof reading and does the placing of the orders. Due to Mrs. Bond's working hours, it is also she who deals with any problems that may arise with suppliers.

Dee Dee Haynes and Lisa Hitchcock are the evening and weekend consultants who are responsible for the majority of the consultations. Ms. Haynes has just completed her third year at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, studying Early Childhood Education and she will be working full-time for the Town of Halton Hills Summer Programs beginning mid-May. Dee Dee will continue to work part-time at Hallmark to provide the high quality service the customers have become accustomed to.

Lisa Hitchcock is a Grade 12 student at Georgetown District High School, who will be returning in the Fall to obtain her OAC's.

This coming summer, Lisa will be working part-time at Golliger's Travel, Brampton, as well as at Hallmark. Aside from her expertise with the wedding line, Ms. Hitchcock is also a soloist who has performed at many local functions and weddings.

Lisa's beautiful voice is an asset to Hallmark and would be perfect for upcoming wedding ceremonies.

This service, along with the no-charge consultation, is available through Hallmark Greetings and Gifts.

When planning a wedding, someone is needed to help make the day go as planned. The friendly and enthusiastic staff at Hallmark Greetings and Gifts are eager to help with the special day. Stop by and visit the store beside Loblaws in the Georgetown Market Place or give them a call at (416) 863-7096.

New business legislation proclaimed

All unincorporated businesses operating under names other than their owners' are now required to have their names registered. Ontario's new Business Names Act, 1989, proclaimed today includes companies in the previously-exempt service industry.

Past laws regulating business names applied only to those in manufacturing, trade or mining. Businesses such as consultants, hairdressers and building contractors were not required to register. But under the new act, they must register their business names by November 30, 1991, with the Companies Branch of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations (MCCR). The new act also applies to business names used by corporations.

"This new legislation will better protect consumers and businesses in Ontario," said Consumer and Commercial Relations Minister Marilyn Churley. "They will have easier access to information about businesses with which they deal. This type of information is particularly important to people trying to settle disputes."

Through registration, business names are placed in public files maintained by the Companies Branch.

The new legislation also provides for legal recourse in cases where damages are suffered as a result of deceptively similar business names. Registering does not in itself give someone exclusive use to a name. But registrants who feel they have suffered damages because someone else registered and used the same name or one that is much the same can take legal action.

Companies with names already on record under the old legislation don't need to re-register until their five-year registration period has expired.
