Debbie (Reynolds) Jones grew up in Norval - her late father, Ivan Reynolds, managed the "Hollywood Tavern" for 17 years. Debbie's mother, Marge, and sisters Penny and Donna, and her brother's Tom and Brian all live in Georgetown.

Debbie attended Norval Public School, Stewarttown Senior Public, and graduated from Georgetown District High School in 1968. After graduation Debbie was employed at the former Abitibi Provincial Paper Company.

Debbie moved to Los Alamos, New Mexico, U.S.A. in 1975 and became an American citizen in 1985. She is now employed by the Los Alamos National Laboratories' Defence Department.

Los Alamos, New Mexico, is located 30 miles outside of Santa Fe. The town is nestled 7,300 ft. up in the beautiful Jemez Mountains.

Debbie travelled to Geneva,

Switzerland to attend talks concerning Nuclear Testings. Arms Control Agreements have become a major element of national security policy and significant focus of political strategy for the United States.

Los Alamos National Laboratories developed the techniques to measure and monitor nuclear testing. Negotiations for arms control have been on-going over several years. The Treaty was "Entered into Force" in January 1991.

The team in Los Alamos responsible for the involved and sensitive "Arms Control" talks in Geneva, were recently recognized for their efforts for weapons programs. An "Award of Excellence" was presented to them for the Department of Energy in Washington D.C. U.S. Admiral Barr travelled to Los Alamos to make the presentation and to attend a reception.

Debbie and her 12-year-old son, Cale, travel home to Georgetown most summers to visit with family and friends.

Former Norval resident, Debbie (Reynolds) Jones is involved in research designed to measure and monitor nuclear testing as part of a U.S. team based in Los Alamos, New Mexico. Ms. Jones recently journeyed to Geneva, Switzerland to attend talks concerning arms control and the team was

Student job search

Self-assessment is important

One of the most important steps to take when beginning a job search is to do a thorough self-assessment. Spend time thinking about who you are and what type of job you would be good at. Try asking yourself some of these questions to help you get started:

- what are some activities I enjoy doing?
- what are my strengths and weaknesses?
- do I have any special skills or talents?
- what are my goals: am I working primarily to gain experience or to earn money?

Try to be as honest with yourself as you can. Once you know where your interests and abilities lie, you'll be well on your way to finding a job best suited to you.

Many students have expressed concern that finding employment this summer is an impossible task. While it is true that jobs are fewer this year, all you need is some creativity in your approach to job hunting. A few suggestions that may be helpful are:

- Remember, only 20 per cent of jobs available are advertised. Inform as many people as you can that you are seeking employment.

- Try taking on two part-time jobs instead of insisting on one full-time position.

- Don't wait for the "perfect job" to fall into your lap. Be flexible - try something new!

- Sign up for the Odd Job Squad at the Canada Employment Centre or Students for some quick cash.

- Don't forget to visit the CEC-S on a regular basis, as new jobs are posted daily and disappear quickly.

Use these tips to guide your summer job hunt and you will be surprised as the opportunities that open up to you.
