

A working artist

Georgetown native Tony Meers and his family were out in full force Wednesday for the opening of Mr. Meers' art exhibition "The Making of a Working Artist, 1966 to 1991" at the Halton Hills Cultural Centre in Georgetown. The exhibition, which runs to Aug. 10, is sponsored by The Friends of Halton Hills

Meeting the challenge

bales on a tractor-driven wagon from a rented hay field to his farm where the bales are stored for convenient feeding of his livestock. (Herald photo by Lisa Boonstoppel-Pot)

The produce from this garden almost supplies the whole neighborhood, joked Marjorie Harrison who was out picking raspberries with her brother Tom Finnamore Tuesday afternoon. The siblings live off Winston Churchill Boulevard in Norval and their garden produces masses of potatoes, corn, lettuce, beets, carrots and tomatoes. Enough to last the pair clear through the winter and their neighbors too! (Herald photo by Lisa Boonstoppel-Pot)

Come one, come all

Come one, come all! That's the message Dee Dee the clown, aka Dee Dee Haynes, Town Recreation and Parks Summer Supervisor, is sending out to Halton Hills children in the hope they will attend the department's Annual Nickel Carnival at the Acton Community Centre, July 17, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Children attending the event will be treated to a variety of games, prizes as well as a magician. For more information call the Town Recreation and Parks Department at 873-2600. (Herald photo)
