

Sick and tired

The Hickory Falls Ratepayers Association is "sick and tired" of people dumping garbage along the Eighth and Ninth Lines near Ballinafad. To try and do something about it they decided Saturday to clean up the area. More people will be encouraged to litter the area if it isn't cleaned, says group member Nancy Mulholland. Group members who participated in the clean-up included (left to right), Rob Davison his son, Warren, Nancy Mulholland, Daphne Shropshall and Julie Davison.

50th anniversary

More than 120 relatives and friends helped Georgetown residents Jim and Maisie Wilson celebrate the couple's 50th anniversary Saturday. The couple has resided in Georgetown for the last 20 years. The anniversary party was put on by several members of the couple's Church, St. Alban's Anglican in Glen Williams. (Herald Photo)

Cancer fundraiser

Georgetown Cancer Society and Wendy's Restaurant on Guelph Street held a car wash Saturday in the restaurant's parking lot to raise money for the the society. Car washers included (left to right), Ted Gorth, Georgetown Cancer Society executive member; Halton Hills Mayor Russ Miller, and Andy Voelker, Wendy's General Manager. The group hoped to raise $500. However, the total wasn't available at press time.

Local Protest

Members of Protect Our Environmental Resources, (POWER), gathered Sunday at the the Third Line United Aggregate Quarry Lookout in Halton Hills to call on Town officials to force United Aggregates to reconstruct the Third Line through the middle of the quarry. POWER members point to an agreement signed between United Aggregates and the Town in 1974 stipulating reconstruction of the Third Line would happen once quarrying activity had stopped. Pictured above, POWER members, (left to right), Steve Wheeler and Diane van de Valk unveil a sheet with the Third Line written on it to symbolize the reconstruction project's beginning.

Cadet command

Flight Sergeant Trevor Brown, of Georgetown 756 Royal Canadian Air Cadets, puts cadets of C Flight through their stationary drills at their Sept. 16 weekly training session at Cedarvale Community Centre in Georgetown. Air cadets (front row, left to right) Sgt. Rod Schmetler, LAC Scott Walker, LAC Dan Estaven, LAC Kevin Haskins and (back row, left to right) Sgt. Steve Walsh, Cpl. Scott Johnston, LAC Shaun Radigan and Cpl. Rob McTaggart are among approximately 33 air cadets, including seven new recruits, taking the weekly training to learn about flight, navigation, fitness, airplanes, leadership and eventually flying a plane. (Herald Photo)