

Books to encourage leisure reading among children

December 1991 Parents looking for recommended children's reading have a new resource—a list of nearly 150 titles selected by the Canadian Library Association. The list was developed for students in the Partners In Excellence national classroom reading program sponsored by World Book Educational Products. It is also available free to parents looking for quality children's books.

The list, organized by reading level from kindergarten through 9th grade, includes both fiction and non-fiction titles from poetry to biographies, ghost stories to adventure. Many are Caldecott or Newberry Medal Award winners, and all are likely to be easy to find in the local or school library. Most are available in English and French.

The purpose of the list is to help parents encourage leisure reading. "Many of the stories will make children laugh and take them to different worlds," said Dr. Alvin Granowsky, World Book vice president of School and Library Services. "Best of all, children love these books—they'll excite them about reading, and that's what the Partners In Excellence program is all about."

Partners In Excellence is a classroom reading program that challenges students to read a minimum of seven books in seven weeks. Students collect a nominal pledge from sponsors, and for every $2 they raise, World Book contributes $1. The money raised places The World Book Encyclopedia, Childcraft-The How and Why Library, and other World Book reference materials in the classroom at no cost to the school. More than 12 million students have read millions of books and put more than 150,000 sets in classrooms and libraries in the U.S. and Canada.

Highlights from the new Partners In Excellence reading list include:

Grades K-2: A Northern Alphabet by Ted Harrison, an alphabet and puzzle-and-game book introducing children to the Canadian North; and Bonnie McSmithers, You're Driving Me Dithers by Sue Ann Alderson, about a lively little girl who gets into great mischief.

Grades 2-4: The Paper Bag Princess by Robert N. Munsch, a very funny story about a clever, independent princess who rescues her betrothed from a fire-breathing dragon; and The Fire Stealer by William Toye (reteller), an adaptation of the North American Indian myth about man's need for fire.

Grades 4-6: The Hockey Sweater by Roch Carrier, the tale of a young Montreal Canadiens fan who, through an error, must wear the sweater of the "despised" Toronto Maple Leafs; Exploring the Night Sky: The Equinox Astronomy Guide for Beginners by Terence Dickinson and Scienceworks: An Ontario Science Centre Book of Experiments by Tina Holdcroft.
