Town wants 1.8-million from province for Georgetown Hospital

If Health Minister Deb Matthews could just see the cramped, aging facilities doctors, nurses and medical staff deal with daily at Georgetown hospital, she would readily provide a $1.8-million shortfall in a $12.1-million project for a CT

Scanner and expanded/renovated emergency and diagnostic imaging departments.

That's the thinking of Mayor Rick Bonnette who invited the Minister on a tour in a letter sent following Council's unanimous vote last Tuesday to grant Halton Healthcare Services $2.6-million towards the project.

"You can now say the Town of Halton Hills has put our money where our mouth is to support this $12.1-million project," Bonnette wrote, adding this would be the first expansion at the Georgetown facility since it was built in 1961, despite growth in the town.

This is Bonnette's fourth letter to the Minister in three months on the issue and he told the Minister last week that he "anxiously await(s) your reply."
