

CH: Use caution near waterways

Conservation Halton is urging residents to be cautious around rivers, streams, lakes and ponds.

As children are about to start March break in the coming week, parents and caregivers are reminded to alert all children under their care to the dangers that exist near the water and to avoid these areas or ensure that children are supervised when anywhere near these waterways.

This week's warmer temperatures will result in the melting of snow, which will increase water levels and the speed at which streams flow.

Slippery and unstable stream banks and extremely cold water temperatures can lead to very hazardous conditions close to any water bodies. Exercise caution around any body of water over the next few weeks. Snow-covered or frozen ponds can also be hazardous, as the weather gets warmer.

Conservation Halton monitors water levels and flow rates year round as part of its flood forecasting and warning program and will closely observe spring water levels. For more information, contact Conservation Halton at 905-336-1158 or visit www.conservationhalton.on.ca for up-to-date information on watershed Flood Status.
