Cory Jentes, pro at The Club at North Halton, demonstrates some stretching exercises golfers should do before hitting the links.

Concentrate on your short game

“The short game is the first to go. People hitting the course for the first time in the spring notice their finesse shots around the greens are bad. “They can't sink a five-foot putt and it takes a while to get the feel back,” says Oliphant. “Practising the short game is vital. Sixty per cent of your score is from 100 yards and in, so if you shake the rust off of your putting and pitching before you hit the course you can still have a decent game despite months away.”

Jentes agrees.
