

ROBIN BANNON

Have Table Will Travel

A herniated disc may have ended Robin Bannon's career as a chef, but it led her to a new career that makes her much happier: massage therapy.

Robin also enjoys educating her clients on the importance of doing simple every day stretches which can have a huge impact in increasing one's mobility.

As a registered massage therapist, Robin uses therapeutic massage techniques to help her clients alleviate pain and lengthen and strengthen muscles. She does a lot of shoulder and intrascapular work, as well as sciatica treatment and posture improvement.

Building relationships with her clients is very important to Robin, who runs her business, Have Table Will Travel, out of Dr. Mark Hassard's chiropractic office in downtown Georgetown.

"Whether you see them only once or twice and help them with their problem, or see them on an ongoing basis, you develop relationships with them and they become comfortable and relaxed which significantly helps their treatment" Robin says.

Robin makes sure she is available to see her clients whenever they need her.

She offers same day, weekend and holiday appointments, and will make house calls if the client can't get out of the house.

"I know how debilitating acute and chronic pain can be" she says. "It's very important that my clients feel they can call me and get in right away."

GISELLE CHARETTE TREMBLAY

Tremblay Home Decorating

If you've ever bought window treatments in Halton Hills, chances are you've heard of Giselle Charette Tremblay. Giselle is the owner and operator of Tremblay Home Decorating, an Acton-based business that specializes in shutters, blinds and draperies for every room of the house.

Giselle is proud to provide unique shop-at-home services where she brings all of her window treatment options, fabric swatches and up-to-date colour samples to her clients' homes. She uses her keen eye for design and style to help her clients find the treatments that meet their needs and tastes and, from there, she orders, installs and services the treatments.

"Not a lot of people out there provide the full service that I do," Giselle says. "It's a lot easier for the consumer to have one person do it all: the ordering, the installing and the servicing. It saves them a lot of frustration down the road."

In her 20 years in the home decorating business, Giselle has built a strong reputation for her honesty, communication and competitive rates. Although she doesn't advertise outside of the Halton Hills area, positive word-of-mouth has brought her business from Cambridge, Kitchener, Guelph and Caledon.

"I treat people how I would want to be treated," she says. "If I've done something wrong, I will admit it. Nine-and-a-half times out of 10, the customer really appreciates that honesty."

AUDE LEMOINE

La Vie en Rose Bed and Breakfast

For a taste of France, look no further than the new La Vie en Rose Bed and Breakfast, located at 17 Victoria Street in Georgetown.

"La vie en rose is a philosophy of life. It means to see the world through rose-tinted glasses," says the B&B's owner Aude Lemoine, who grew up in the Brittany region of France. "It's also a famous song by French singer Edith Piaf, which I really like."

The 100-year-old house-turned-B&B has three guestrooms with themes like Une Nuit à Paris, Balade en Provence and Cap en Bretagne. The décor integrates furnishings from local artists with articles from France.

"I'm in love my house and I wanted to share it with others," says Aude, who likes to stay in B&B's when she travels.

Every morning, guests are treated to a fresh French breakfast, including crepes, baguettes, fresh fruit and homemade yogurt. Aude lives on the top floor of the large house and does all of the cooking and cleaning.

"I love to cook and entertain. It's part of my culture," Aude says. "I want to give my guests a French experience. Who said you have to take a plane to go to France?"

In addition to the B&B, Aude also offers French courses and monthly French cultural evenings where guests do fun French activities like watch a movie, play board games or learn a new recipe.

La Vie en Rose Bed and Breakfast is open for business and Aude is planning a grand opening ceremony for the early spring.

Business Partners Sabrina Corker and Connie Ward of the Royal Academy of Arts and Education are in the business of families. Located in the Georgetown Market Place, the Royal Academy offers music, art and tutoring lessons for kids of all ages.

"We're a one-stop shop. One child can be in for an art lesson while their sibling is in for a piano lesson and another is in for tutoring," Sabrina says.

The Royal Academy's highly trained music instructors give private lessons for piano, guitar, voice, violin, saxophone and drums. Students are taught Royal Conservatory methodology and lessons are a combination of exam preparation and playing fun popular music.

This summer, the Royal Academy is running Vocal Stars Summer Camp where students will cover and record songs by artists like Taylor Swift, Miley Cyrus, Carrie Underwood and the Jonas Brothers. During the weeklong camp, which runs from the week of July 12 to the week of August 23, participants will also design a CD cover. Registration is limited to 10 students per session, so call today to secure your spot.
